Laugh Month
One Lady, One Shoot
India's Untouchables
Her 29th Son, at 68

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1925, by Star Company.

IT IS ANNOUNCED, with solemnity, that January is to be "laugh month." You are supposed to cultivate the habit of smiling and laughing, to become an optimist and otherwise a 100 per center.

WHY WAIT for January? Every month is laugh month in the United States, when you think about the kind of aircraft management we have, and our complete failure to remedy a miserable situation.

WE HAVE one man that understands aviation, Mitchell. Because he tells the truth they put him on trial, trying to drive him out of the army.

We had another man that understood management of dirigibles. Commander Lansdowne, of the Shenandoah, who had crossed the ocean in a dirigible.

He warned the Navy Department against sending the Shenandoah to destruction. They ignored him, sent the ship to her doom, killing him. And then they held a whitewashing investigation, intended, apparently, to prove that the wreck of the Shenandoah was the fault of her commander, although he would be alive today and his ship safe had his advice been taken.

ONE PARAGRAPH in the report of the President's aircraft commission says that although the next war may begin in the air, it is apt, like the last war, to end in the mud.

That tells only part of the story. The next war will start in the air, striking at cities on the ground, and the nation in that next war that finds itself inadequately supplied with flying machines "will wind up in the mud" of defeat, disgrace and bankruptcy.

IF WAR CAME now, between this nation and a nation well supplied with fighting airships, this nation would wind up in the mud.

And the fault would be with the government of the United States, discouraging men that understand flying, confiding the flying problem of the country to "big butter and egg men." A nation that only talks, while other nations build flying machines, is headed for trouble. This is such a nation.

THE LAW ALLOWS each dog "one bite." Unless it can be proved that the dog is biting for the second time, he and his owner are not responsible.

In Chicago the rule seems to be that each lady, especially if married, is entitled to "one shoot." Mrs. Mary Kuna, who killed her husband, and who has just been acquitted by a Chicago jury, is the last of a long and honorable line. Of forty women recently tried for husband murder, in Chicago, only nine were convicted, not one was hanged.

The question seems to be, "If a lady may not kill her own husband, whose husband may she kill?"

DO YOU occasionally devote "tearful hours" to sympathizing with poor Hindus, and other 300,000,000 Asiatics in India, held under the thumb of Great Britain? You might squeeze out an extra tear for India's 40,000,000 "untouchables."

Poor Ghandi, well-meaning fanatic, trying to drive the British out of India by imposing long fasts upon his thin body, nobly defends his miserable fellow countrymen, the "untouchables."

IT IS HARD for us to realize that the "caste system" of India shows 40,000,000 human beings in the three vile classes of "untouchability, unapproachability and invisibility."

It is pollution and disgrace even to touch some of them. With others, the high caste Hin-

PLAYED FALSE ROLE FOR 14 YEARS AS WIFE OF CHARLES BRYANT

New York, Dec. 5.—For fourteen years Alla Nazimova, darling of the emotional stage and the movies, lived as the wife of the handsome Charles Bryant, her leading man—though she was married to another in Russia.

Last Summer she went to Paris and divorced the husband of her early womanhood, and returned to sanctify her union with the man of her heart.

"When I came back, I heard in New York and in Hollywood that Charles was in love with Marjorie Gilhooley. He admitted it was true. So, I let him go and marry her—and may God make him happy!"

All this, and much more the idol of the American theatre admitted, as she unwove the tangled skein of her life which for weeks has puzzled her public.

"Nazimova divorced in Paris," said recent dispatches. "Bryant weds Marjorie Gilhooley and says he has never been married before." New York papers told a few days after that. And how could such be, Broadway asked, thinking she had divorced Bryant.

From Nazimova's lips came the story of her life and actions, far

CHILDREN MIX MEDICINE THAT KILLS SALEM BABY

Salem, Dec. 5.—Poison which she and her playmates mixed with medicine while playing "doctor" caused the death today of Frances Kozlowski, four years old, daughter of Anthony Kozlowski of No. 85 Derby street.

Hours of pain preceded the girl's death. She had been ill for several days with a cold. Children who came in to play with her, according to the police, mixed creolin and ammonia with the medicine Frances was taking.

Later her aunt, not knowing what the children had done, gave her a dose of the mixture and almost immediately the child was in convulsions. She died at the Victoria Hospital.

FAKE LICENSES LAID TO GOODWIN'S OFFICE

A new critic of Frank A. Goodwin, Registrar of Motor Vehicles, attacked the local czar of motordom today even as Goodwin was in the midst of his verbal passage-at-arms with Representative John I. Fitzgerald.

Attorney John F. Daly, of No. 6 Beacon street, stepped into the fight, not as a defender of Martin Lomasney's lieutenant whom Goodwin branded as a "sinister shadow in the court house and district attorney's

JURY'S FINDINGS ALL FAVOR DUSKY BRIDE OF LEONARD RHINELANDER

By International News Service

White Plains, N. Y., Dec. 5.—The jury found in favor of Alice Jones Rhinelander, the quadroon bride of Leonard Kip Rhinelander, scion of one of New York's oldest and most famous families, it was revealed today when the sealed verdict, handed in last night in young Rhinelander's suit to annul his marriage, was opened in Supreme Court here.

The jury answered six questions of the seven given them in the colored bride's favor, leaving the seventh unanswered. It is presumed that under the law Judge Morschauser will render a decision that the marriage of Rhinelander and the daughter of a negro odd job man must stand.

The jury answered the questions submitted to them in the following manner:

1—At the time of the marriage of the parties, was the defendant colored and of colored blood? Yes.

2—Did the defendant, by silence, conceal from the plaintiff the fact that she was of colored blood? No.

3—Did the defendant, before the marriage, represent to the plaintiff that she was not of colored blood? No.

4—Did the defendant practice such concealment or make such representations with the intent thereby to induce the plaintiff to marry her? No.

5—Was the plaintiff by such concealment or by such representations or by both, induced to marry the defendant? No.

6—If the plaintiff had known the defendant was of colored blood, would he have married her? Yes.

7—Did the plaintiff live with the defendant after he had obtained full knowledge that the defendant was of colored blood. Not answered.

Rhinelander was not in court when the verdict against him was read.

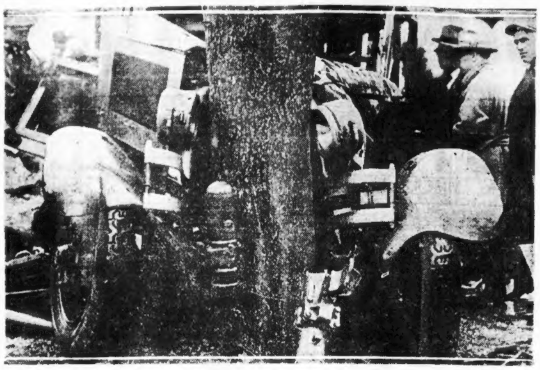
BLAME BEING FIXED TODAY FOR COLLISION OF BUS THAT INJURED EIGHTEEN IN WOBURN

Mrs. Mary Ducharme of No. 503 Moody street, Lowell, whose face was badly lacerated by the flying debris of the wrecked bus.

Miss Madeline Frazer of No. 128 West Sixth street, Lowell, who was burned and lacerated before she was hauled out with a relative.



The terrific force with which the Nashua Boston bus struck the tree at Lexington road and Cambridge street, Woburn, is shown by the crumpled condition of the heavy machine. It was struck by a truck coming in an opposite direction which is said to have skidded on the road. Eighteen persons were injured and there are three official investigations of the accident under way today.

Another of the Frazer family injured in the wrecked bus. Raymond escaped with lacerations. The third injured member of the family was Mrs. Sadie Frazer.

GOODWIN IS DENOUNCED BY LAWYER

office," but as defender of the judges whom Goodwin has criticized.

The attorney charged the registrar with gross neglect of his office, and ignoring traffic in bogus licenses by some of his staff.

The affair began when young Charles Roper of the West End, arrested with three pals for holdups, boasted Fitzgerald's influence would free him. Fitzgerald repudiated the boy, but admitted he had once bailed him out.

Atty. Daly began his attack by saying that Goodwin had made a cowardly exhibition of himself on the witness stand in Suffolk Superior Court a year ago, when, although he was filling the papers with statements and charges against judges and juries, he showed he had no facts whatever to support his contentions.

"Goodwin," said the lawyer, "set himself up as a public benefactor in his office when actually he was neglecting that office. He issued licenses to one-legged men, men almost blind, deaf men, even to men who could not read or write.

"I wrote to him telling him that I knew of one of his staff who was purveying bogus licenses, and I offered to give him my information, but he never answered the letter, though one of his inspectors told me that Goodwin suspected one of his staff of selling bogus licenses.

"My charges are not imaginative, they are on record. Only last week in the West Roxbury court a motorist was charged with causing the death of a pedestrian, and the attorney for the insurance company was under the handicap of explaining to the court that the defendant, who was licensed to drive by Goodwin, was a cripple and could not use his brakes!"

CHALLENGED TO DEBATE.

"I shall be most happy to meet Mr. Goodwin before the Chamber of Commerce or any other civic organization and uphold the affirmative on the question: 'Resolved, that the present registrar of motor vehicles has demonstrated his unfitness to hold the office and should be removed.'"

The letter which Attorney Daly sent to Goodwin last August, with the names deleted at the request of the attorney, reads:

"Two clients have consulted me with reference to two licenses issued by your registry, which licenses they hold and which are bogus.

"These men—(names and addresses deleted) are illiterates, cannot read or write, and it is plain that a person took the examination for them, produced the licenses and collected for the services.

CHARGES INHUMANITY.

"A short time ago a man with nine children and an aged mother to support was brought into district court in East Cambridge. Though there was real need and destitution in that home the justice, because of the act placed on the statute books by Goodwin, was compelled to send the man to jail because there had been the odor of liquor on his breath.

"I had a case a year and a half ago similar in nature in East Cambridge, and I am writing to say that I advised these men to tell all the truth about the transactions, and my investigation shows that there are at least two men in (deleted) who are apparently engaged in a large scale doing this work among the foreigners.

"If you care I should be glad to have your inspector drop in at the office and I will have these men present and cause them to divulge all the facts."

Dr. James H. Corbett, father of the missing girl, returned to his home in Utica.

SEVEN TAXICAB STRIKERS HELD

Seven Checker taxicab strikers were arrested today by Belmont police, charged with assaulting Charles A. Butt, a Checker driver, and robbing him of $200 and his driver's license in Waverley.

MISSING FARM MANAGER RETURNS

East Bridgewater, Dec. 5.—Frank Bouley, manager of Cold Spring Farm, returned home today after disappearing last Thursday. He was wet, bedraggled and suffering from exposure.

Police and firemen of this town and Whitman had been searching for him. Bouley gave no explanation of his disappearance, merely stating that he had been for a long walk in the woods. It is believed, however, that worry and hard work were responsible for his action.

Just before he disappeared Bouley told his brother-in-law that he would be the last person in the world to talk to him. This statement caused relatives to fear he intended to do away with himself and they immediately notified the police. Cold Spring Farm is owned by Mrs. Clarence D. Reed of Whitman, widow of C. D. Reed, millionaire shoe manufacturer.

TWO ADDED TO POLICE FORCE IN SOUTH END

As a result of the crime wave, an additional special officer was appointed today for duty at East Dedham street police station, and another appointment was made to fill a vacancy caused by the recent promotion of Special Officer James O'Neil to a sergeancy.

LOS ANGELES JOINS HUB IN PHONE FIGHT

The fight against exorbitant telephone rates was brought to the fore again today by the announcement that the city of Los Angeles will cooperate with Boston in the latter's investigation of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company at Washington, and the declaration by Washington Cook of the Governor's Council that he will oppose the reappointment of Henry G. Wells as a commissioner of public utilities.

Wells, one of the members of the commission that awarded the $9,000,000 rate increases to the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company, was reappointed for a term of five years by Governor Fuller; approval of the council, however, is required.

In Los Angeles, Mayor George Cryer has asked the city council to authorize the city attorney to join with E. Mark Sullivan, corporation counsel of Boston, in the action before the Interstate Commerce Commission to force an investigation of telephone rates, contracts and profits.

"In view of the fact that this commission has allowed the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company to increase its rates whereby the company is to take $9,000,000 more a year out of the earnings of the people, I will have to be shown that this advance is justifiable before I allow myself to even think of voting for his confirmation," declared Cook.

THREE SEPARATE PROBES OF BUS CRASH STARTED

Separate probes, one by the office of the district attorney, another emanating from the office of Registrar Goodwin, and a third by the State fire marshal, are under way into the cause of the wreck of the Nashua-Boston bus in Woburn when 18 persons were injured.

Seven of the 18 hurt are still in hospitals. The others have been sent to their homes.

The drivers of the bus and the truck with which it collided both claim they were running at a moderate rate of speed. Witnesses to the accident differ and declare that both autos were going at a fast rate when they struck.

The truck was carrying a load of motion picture films and, according to witnesses, this film was not in tin containers as is prescribed by law.

State Fire Marshall Neal is investigating the stories of witnesses to the effect that when the truck turned over huge piles of this uncoiled film, deadly inflammable, were strewn about the road.

NAZIMOVA NOT MARRIED TO BRYANT

more tense than any role she ever played. Like "Nora," in "A Doll's House,"—one of her great interpretations—the time came 14 years ago when she slammed shut the door on her past and her husband, and sought to live her own life.

"I was playing on Broadway then, and Charles Bryant—you know how charming and handsome Charles was and is—was my leading man. I was married to my Russian, but there were complications, and there could be no divorce then."

A few days after they had opened their show "the newspapers married me to Bryant," she said, just as "last Summer they divorced me from him."

She neither denied nor admitted those newspaper articles, which told of "Alla Nazimova's wedding breakfast," when champagne flowed like bounding billows. So, for 14 years she faced the problem of making the World believe that she really was married to him—and the World did believe, and applauded one of the rare cases of a feminine star being happily married.

She explained:

"I tried to get a divorce—I wanted to be decent before man and before my God."

But there were those "complications," which she did not care to explain.

HUNTS WAY OUT.

The years passed. Both screen and stage hailed her genius. On one, the greatest Ibsen interpreter America has; on the other, a consummate actress giving the priceless illusion of whimsical childhood.

And all the while Ala Nazimova was praying that she would find "a way out."

Some there are who remember Nazimova's most poignant role—that of a Magdalene who aids a New York clubman to get a divorce, under the rigid New York law, which permits divorce only for statutory causes. That was George Middleton's one-act play which appeared at the Palace for only a few performances, being withdrawn because of clerical protest.

"Then, I am of some good in the world after all, eh?"

That was Nazimova's last line in that gripping part—a part in which she threw her whole soul, praying all the time, no doubt, that someone in real life would give her a chance to divorce the nameless Russian of her yesteryears.

HER LAST LOVE KISS.

A chance of a kind did come, and last Summer she kissed Charles Bryant farewell and hastened to Paris for the divorce which would permit her to marry Bryant and become "decent before man and my God."

Nazimova tried to keep that divorce quiet, but reporters heard of it and, not obtaining the name of the man, credited Bryant with being the victim, to Nazimova's horror.

But she could marry Charles "again," couldn't she, and the world wouldn't be the wiser. So home she rushed—and found that in her absence Marjorie Gilhooley had captured her man's heart. All had been in vain!

Nazimova said that Bryant's lawyer advised him that if he went to Canada or Mexico he would not have to reveal that he had never been married before. But, instead, Charles Bryant went to rock-ribbed New England, where he was asked the question when he applied for a marriage license:

BRYANT TELLS THE TRUTH.

"Have you ever been married before?"

Charles Bryant had to tell the truth—"No."

Now that the world knows all, Nazimova prays that her public will drape the mantle of charity over her past—and forget. She loved much, and she gave much. And even in her despair she rises to the heights of the thoroughbred when she says:

"As for Charles Bryant, may God make him happy!"

STATE UNION DEFIES FULLER AND ELECTS

In defiance of Governor Fuller, the union of 12,000 State employes, known as the Comonwealth Service Association, was formally launched today at the Hotel Essex.

Twenty-five members of five State-wide units, individually organized, went into executive session to choose a president and other officers of the super-organization, and a board of directors.

Among those present, as officers of the Eastern Massachusetts Unit, the largest of the individual organizations, were Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin and Deputy State Treasurer George B. Willard. The latter, several days ago, announced his candidacy for the presidency.

Following the elections, the program called for the adoption of a constitution and the promulgation of policies. According to one member, the policies will be along lines already announced, chief among which is the question of salaries.

Governor Fuller, at the time of the announcement of the plans for the "union," declared the members need expect no special consideration of a favorable nature on salaries from him and he warned the younger employes against being led into trouble by "radical leaders."

Through his secretary, the Governor today declined to comment further on the association.

Woman Who Was Found Dying in Her Home Finally Taken to Hospital

Providence, Dec. 5.—Mrs. Robert E. Munro, thirty-seven, of Bristol, wife of a member of the secretarial staff of the Rhode Island Hospital Trust Company, died today at Rhode Island Hospital from a bullet wound in her head.

Police at first maintained secrecy about her death, but later reported it with the explanation that her family had desired to keep it as secret as possible.

Mrs. Munro was in bed and under the care of two nurses, following a temporary mental derangement after she gave birth to a child three months ago. She was found on the floor of her bedroom and a physician ordered her taken to the hospital for treatment for a fractured skull.

Her doctor today disclaimed all knowledge of a gunshot wound. While awaiting the report of Medical Examiner Griffin the police tentatively assigned the death as suicidal.

BOYS' DEBUT AS TOPERS BARES SMUGGLED ALE

St. Albans, Vt., Dec. 5 (A.P.).—When she found her young boy pupils trying to open a quart bottle of Canadian ale, the teacher in the village school at Georgia, just outside this city, sent an emergency call to prohibition headquarters.

The bottle and the source of supply, eight sacks of ale abandoned by border smugglers, were confiscated.

The teacher had missed the boys from the yard and noticed a group of little girls whispering excitedly about the cloak room. When she opened the cloak room door she found the boys struggling to open a large bottle of "Black Horse" ale.

Two deputy collectors and inspectors found the supply where the children had indicated. A border smuggler, hard pressed by prohibition officers, had jettisoned part of his cargo.

FUGITIVE 'RUM QUEEN' CAUGHT

St. Albans, Vt., Dec. 5 (A.P.).—Hilda Stone, who has gained a local reputation as the so-called "Queen of the Border Rum-Runners," was recaptured near Island Pond in company with a man said to be a well-known rum-runner.

The woman was confined in North Stratford last Sunday with two rum-runners, but she had departed when officers from St. Albans arrived.

She was held in $1,500 bail today. At the time of her arrest she was at liberty under bail furnished after her arrest by a Newport, Vt., patrol. Officers say she comes from Colerain, Mass.

An automobile loaded with 117 gallon cans of alcohol was abandoned today by rum-runners after a five-mile chase in Lunenburg, Vt.

SECOND SON OF "AL" SMITH ELOPES

In eloping, Arthur followed the example of his elder brother, Alfred E. Smith, Jr., who on October 15, 1924, when he was 23 years old, secretly married Miss Bertha Gott of Syracuse, N. Y.

CURLEY LEAVES POLICE PAY RAISE TO NICHOLS

The question of increasing the pay of the superior officers in the police department will be left to the Nichols administration, [illegible] Curley announced today. The announcement was a reply to a request of Councillor Gilbody through a council resolution to have the mayor and the police commissioner confer on the subject.

HEART MOVING PICTURE SHOWING HOW GOOD FELLOWS ARE MADE TO PLAY SANTA

Unless Good Fellows get busy there'll be no Santa Clause in their home this year. Mrs. William Pyne, No. 155 Athens street, tells her children Joseph, Rose and Anna.

So Anna and Rose Pyne, who believe in Santa Claus, do their share and write to the Boston Evening American, in care of Good Fellow Editor.

Then Pat Cosgrove, "Good Fellow" Editor, looking over his mail, gets the letter and encloses it in one he writes to a Good Fellow friend.

The latter happens to be Mr. C. D. Stevens, No. 80 Gainsboro street, whose big heart is so touched by the childish faith and appeal that he gets busy.

And straight away he begins to play the Santa Claus game and goes to the store of Fellows & Co., Boston and loads up with toys which will prove the faith of Anna and Rose.

17 BLOWS AND 19 KICKS LAID TO 'HUFFY' COP

George Murray of No. 209 West Second street, South Boston, today in formal complaint to Police Commissioner Wilson, charged that he had been beaten for no reason by Patron Leon M. Randall of station 6, South Boston. Murray specifies that Randall struck him with his night stick seventeen times and kicked him nineteen times.

Commissioner Wilson is investigating the charges.

Murray declares that he will bring as witnesses patrons and employes of the Strand lunchroom, Broadway, South Boston, where, he alleges, the assault was started.

According to Murray, he had just finished eating in the lunchroom and was on his way to the cashier's desk to pay his check when Patrolman Randall pushed into him. Murray looked up in surprise as there was plenty of room, he said, and the push seemed unnecessary.

"Don't you like it?" Randall is said to have asked.

"No, I don't." Murray says he retorted.

Whereup, according to Murray, Randall knocked him down with his fist.

Murray got up and declares he said, "I'll report you for this."

"Oh you are one of those wise guys." Randall is alleged to have retorted.

Then, Murray says, assault was renewed, the patrolman striking him with his night stick all the way to the police station.

In front of the station house, Murray says, the policeman gave him one parting clout which loosened his teeth, and told him to go home, refusing to arrest him.

STORM PREVENTS PILOT QUITTING OUTBOUND LINER

Old King Storm may force Captain Charles W. Frye, Boston pilot, to spend his Christmas holidays in German, in England or on the high seas. He was unable to quit the Hamburg-American steamer Thuringia as she sailed today for Queenstown and Hamburg. The Thuringia did all it could to let Captain Frye down in the lower harbor, but the storm was against it, hence he went out on the ship. The storm continued to hold up shipping today, there being but few arrivals and no sailings except that of Thuringia. One fishing schooner arrived at the Fish Pier, and as only three arrived yesterday stocks were low and prices went up. Shamrock was the lone arrival today with about 56,000 pounds of groundfish aboard.

CITY COUNCIL TO VOTE ON NEW PRINTING PLANT

Monday the City Council will decide whether the city is to have a printing plant in a building of its own as desired by Mayor Curley. The plant has been in leased quarters since 1897. The mayor asks that $40,000 be appropriated for land, building and architect fees; the site to be on Battery street, the location of the old police station 8, and adjoining lots. The adjoining property consists of a four-story wooden dwelling, assessed at $18,000, and owned by Benjamin Wooley. The purchase of this was made today by the city, $20,000 being paid.

Honeymoon Pair in Florida, See Dream Vanish

"Just Back from Florida. Barnum was Right."

It had Florida and Massachusetts number plates.

A policeman interviewed the occupants, who said: "We've been on a ten weeks' honeymoon trip to Florida, the land of perpetual sunshine, but rain and all Boston look a whole lot better. We intended to stay down there, but nothing doing. Barnum said a mouthful. So did the chap that said: 'There's one born every minute.'"

Washington, Dec. 5 (I.N.S.).—Colonel Andrew Hero, Jr., was selected today as the new chief of coast artillery, succeeding Major-General Thomas W. Coe, who is shortly to retire after thirty-seven years service. Colonel Hero is a native of New Orleans.

LA FOLLETTE IGNORES G. O. P.

Washington, Dec. 5 (A.P.)—The Republican members of the Senate today postponed decision on receiving into the party fold Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, whose father was excluded last session.

Meeting to organize for the new session to begin Monday, the Republicans confined deliberations to unanimous selection of Edwin P. Thayer of Indianapolis as secretary of the Senate.

Following his father's custom during the latter years of his life, La Follette remained away from the conference, although invited to attend.

It now is the plan of the Republicans to formally ask Senator La Follette if he desires the Republican organization to give him committee assignments. Then another conference will be called.

Curley for Half-Holidays

Mayor Curley on Monday will ask the city council to amend the city ordinances so that all city departments shall close at noon on Saturday all the year around.

COLD WAVE TO FOLLOW RAIN

Little letup in the present heavy rains is promised for the next twenty-four or thirty-six hours. It is possible a brief respite may come between the present tropical storm and the disturbances now forming over the Middle Western States and moving eastward rapidly.

The total rainfall for the present storm was 3.57 inches today, which brings the total for the year to within .71 of normal. With rain predicted for tomorrow, there is little doubt the normal fall will be greatly exceeded.

Storm warnings were again ordered up today from the Virginia Capes to Eastport, Me.

Chaplins Await Another Visit From Stork

Hollywood, Cal., Dec. 5 (A.P.).—A report in motion picture circles that the stork is to make a second visit to the home of Charlie Chaplin, comedian, has been partly confirmed at the Chaplin Studio.

"Well, this is just a little previous, isn't it?" the comedian countered in answer to queries.

"We are in hopes and I would be very happy if it were true. Come around a little later and we may have something to tell you. Mrs. Chaplin is the one to see."

WIFE OF FORD FIDDLER BOBS HAIR FOR VISIT

Norway, Me., Dec. 5.—Henry Ford may get a surprise when his old-fashioned fiddler protege, "Mel" Dunham, arrives in Detroit, for "Mel's" wife, Emma, who confesses to sixty-seven years, has her grey locks cut in a snappy, city bob.

Dressed in their Sunday best, carrying just one grip for their joint belongings, the Dunhams will leave here Monday to accept the invitation of Ford to play old-fashioned tunes for him.

Sitting by the stove in the living-room of the little white farmhouse six miles from town, the same house where Dunham was born seventy-two years ago, the fiddler looked approvingly at his wife as she discussed her bobbed locks.

"Land sakes! I wouldn't have my hair no way else," she said. "It's most comfortable and most sensible, this way. I go walking in the woods and don't get my hair caught in any bushes, and I don't have to wear any of those nets, either."

"By gum! She's sensible in everything but choosing a husband," said "Mel," slapping his knee.

"I've been playing for fifty-five years," he continued, "and I want to tell you that when it comes to dances, six-eight time's the best. My favorites for dances are the 'Irish Washwoman' and the 'Lanigan Ball.' Them two's got lots of snap to 'em, but when it comes to getting the crowd, you give me 'The Campbells are Coming.'"

The Carroll, Jellison shoe factory was placarded with a huge sign today, announcing that the factory would be closed until 9:30 Monday morning so the employes could attend "Mellie Dunham's celebration." The Kiwanis Club will participate in the parade Monday morning and B. G. McIntyre, prominent lumberman, and Governor Brewster will deliver farewell speeches.

GODAT LAWYERS STILL PEPPY

Judge McCool, who has threatened to stop the Godat [illegible] in Suffolk probate court unless the rival lawyers [illegible] personalities, was compelled to repeat his warning today, and the bickering counsel called a truce.

Henry Godat, who is being sued by Mrs. Fannie Godat, started hostilities himself today when he shouted to his wife's attorney: "Don't you holler at me!"

Godat denied that he goes frequently to a local hotel to dance with a young woman known as "Peggy." He did admit that he played cards all night with "Peggy" and another couple, but said that he had never been alone with either of the women.

Mrs. Godat admitted that she had been convicted of conspiring to commit perjury. Her appearance was the occasion of a storm of tears from herself and her daughter.

MOTHERS PLEAD FOR JOYS OF CHRISTMAS

BE A GOOD FELLOW!

It costs so little and it means so much—both to you and to the unfortunates whom you aid to joy and happiness at Christmas time.

The chance of a lifetime is offered to big hearts by the Boston Evening American, and hundreds of Good Fellows are responding.

There cannot be too many volunteers in happiness, however, for the letters from luckless children and from families that see little hope for a merry Christmas, are pouring in just as rapidly.

DADDY POOR, BUT GOOD.

I am a little girl 12 years old and I have two little sisters age 1½ and one 8, also two brothers one 11 years old and one 14 years old and we are very poor, papa has been out of work some of the time and when he is working he gets $18. a week but he is a good daddy just the same to us. ## BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Hub Smart Set Crowds Trinity Church for McIlvaine-Fenno Wedding Today

(Photograph by Bachrach.)

MRS. DAVID SEARS is the peasant maiden from Italy in the colorful Italian scene arranged by Carbone for the Animated Advertising.

A BRIDE OF PIQUANT BLONDE CHARM, a bridegroom from out of the West, lovely young women and swagger young men in imposingly large entourage and stately Trinity filled with wedding guests of Boston's finest—given these ingredients a wedding shines forth on the social calendar with special radiance.

SUCH WAS THE ceremonial today at high noon uniting Miss Marian Shaw Fenno, daughter of Mrs. Lawrence Carteret Fenno, and William B. McIlvaine, Jr., Harvard Law graduate and son of the William Brown McIlvaines of Winnetka, Illinois.

FENNO FAMILY representation in the bride's entourage consisted of Miss Florence Fenno as honor maid and the Misses Pauline and Elizabeth Fenno as bridesmaids, sisters of the bride. Miss Peggy Porter, Miss Alice Thomas and Mrs. David Sears pace the measured tread also.

TRINITY'S DIM VASTNESS was gorgeously brightened by the slow-moving processional up a candle-lighted aisle; ushers in correct formal array, bride attendants in glowing cyclamen crepe and the bride, central figure of the pageantry, in satin and beautifully wrought lace.

ALL THE WEDDING GOWN features were prettily carried out, a veil of tulle bound fillet fashion, bouquet of fragrant white, and a long slender court train banded with lace to enrich the gown of satin.

BRIDESMAIDS' CHAPEAUX were smartest of the smart—big felt affairs faced in velvet and having a single enormous velvet flower caught at the brim. Hats and velvet shoes of the rich deep pink completed the crepe and velvet one color note most successfully.

YOUNG MATRONS COME back to Boston to attend Miss Fenno—Mrs. Louis B. McCagg, Jr. (Katherine Winslow), and Mrs. Geoffrey S. Smith (Katherine Coolidge) from New York and Philadelphia, while Miss Mary Ramsay, Quaker City belle, completes the number.

EQUALLY IMPORTANT and quite as widely representative is the best man-usher squad headed by William Harding Jackson of New York. Baltimoreans to the number of three serve—Messrs. Benjamin H. Brewer, Blanchard Randall, Jr., and John C. Cooper, Jr.

CHARLES DENBY, JR., comes from the "Federal City," George M. Appleton from Buffalo, T. R. Forgan from the Windy City, and a duo from Gotham—Morrison Ullman and Eugene Maxwell. Edward M. MacNichol is the sole Boston man ushering.

THE CHURCH CEREMONIAL was followed by an equally brilliant reception at the Fenno town house, a handsome mansion in Beacon street, one of the few of Boston homes running into that charming feature, a spacious ballroom.

MRS. FENNO ANNOUNCED her daughter's engagement to Mr. McIlvaine from Europe last Summer, during the family's residence [illegible]. Their marriage takes the bride away from her highly placed [illegible] is generally regretted. The new home is to be in Hubbard's [illegible].

GALA WITH TWO such important functions as the evening [illegible] Boston Cotillon Minots' ball and the first Sonia Supper Dance, [illegible] "going on" by the Fashionables from one to the other. [illegible] at the Hotel Somerset introduced their ward and [illegible].

THE [illegible] type admirably became the simple white [illegible] an affair with the utmost suggestion of [illegible]. Mrs. Minot's ball costume was a rich creation [illegible] velvet with the all pervading "Midas" touch in its dull silver [illegible].

A DISTINCTLY HANDSOME figure at the [illegible] was Mrs. Philip de Laszlo, wife of the famous artist now doing portraits of certain of the Boston elect. She and her distinguished husband held quite a court. Her ball gown was the softest tint of [illegible] blue with large pearls in strands from the shoulder.

VIVID COLOR NOTES about the [illegible] ballroom were Mrs. Edward Jackson Holmes' vermilion [illegible], Mrs. J. Brooks' rosewood and silver, Mrs. Russell Sturgis' [illegible] and silver and Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer's silver and crystal tulle over blue.

LAST YEAR'S TWIN debutantes, Misses Louise and Priscilla Waterman, wore one a crimson velvet, the other blue. Miss Caroline and Miss Harriet Saltonstall wore their shell pink baby frocks, and Miss Dorothy Lawrence was in honey yellow taffeta, hand painted in enormous flowers.

IT WAS A LOVELY garden of girls—Miss Nancy Murray in rose pink, Miss Theodora Ayer in deep purple, Miss Cornelia Clark in Egyptian crepe, Miss Barbara Forbes in rosewood taffeta, Miss Josephine Jewell in chartreuse crepe and Miss Evelyn Cummings in shell pink taffeta and net.

OF THE SET GOING [illegible] the ball and the supper dance, Mrs. John S. Lawrence in pomegranate red, Mrs. S. Huntington Wolcott in silver cloth smartly combined with black velvet, Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, Jr., in black chantilly lace, Mrs. Allan Forbes in spider-web lace over girdle were much in the [illegible].

OF COURSE THE upper [illegible] set was out in force for the initial dance. Mrs. John E. Howard's blonde beauty was set off with a silver and sky blue metal cloth and Mrs. Gerald A. Boardman wore white crepe with pearls. Mrs. Valentine Hollingsworth a maize crepe and Mrs. Herbert Jaques black velvet.

THE TALL AND slender Mrs. William D. Sohier, Jr., formerly Elinor Denegre, was in turquoise brocade undershot with silver, Mrs. Alvin F. Sortwell in white with sequins, and Mrs. Henry W. Minot in striped rose and white taffeta.

CARDINAL WILL BE 66 NEXT TUESDAY

By JAMES WALSH

William Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston, Metropolitan of New England and dean of the Catholic hierarchy in America, will be 66 years old on Tuesday.

The date of the Cardinal's birth is also observed as one of the great feasts of the Catholic Church—the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin Mary, the patroness of Catholics of the United States.

More than a million men, women and children, as well as prelates and priests and members of religious orders in his archdiocese, will offer their felicitations and will pray for their spiritual leader.

Not alone will the Cardinal be congratulated by his flock. Messages will come, as they do annually, from almost every quarter of the earth.

BORN AT LOWELL.

Cardinal O'Connell was born at Lowell in 1859. He was educated in the Lowell schools and entered St. Charles College, near Baltimore. Later he studied at Boston College, from which he was graduated in 1881.

Immediately afterward he went to Rome, where he entered the American College and was ordained to the priesthood in 1884. After a year of further study in the Eternal City, he returned to Boston for duty at St. Joseph's Church, Medford. Later he was at St. Joseph's Church, West End.

Just ten years after he was ordained the cardinal was appointed rector of the North American College in Rome. In 1897 he was named domestic prelate, and four years later he was appointed bishop of the Portland, Me., diocese.

In January, 1905, he was made assistant at the Pontifical Throne, and in August of the same year was sent as special envoy to the Emperor of Japan. While on this mission to the Flowery Kingdom, the Mikado bestowed upon him the Grand Cordon of the Sacred Treasure.

ELEVATED TO SEE.

On his return in 1906 he was named Archbishop of Constantia and coadjutor with the right of succession to the Archbishop of Boston. He succeeded to the See of Boston on August 30, 1907, and was created Cardinal November 27, 1911.

His fame is world wide. His flock is loyal. People generally, regardless of denomination, will wish him continuance of his splendid health and many more years of life to carry out his great work—the interests of his church, the spiritual and general welfare of his flock and the betterment of mankind.

BISHOP O'LEARY BACK HOME

Rt. Rev. Thomas M. O'Leary, bishop of Springfield, is back in America after a visit to the Vatican, and the ecclesiastical head of the riverside city starts once more his duties under the new impetus and benediction given him by His Holiness the Pope.

Bishop O'Leary was appointed bishop of Springfield in 1921, being called from Manchester, N. H., where he was vicar general of the diocese. He succeeded the late Rt. Rev. Thomas D. Beaven.

In the opinion of churchmen all over the country Bishop O'Leary has done wonderful work in Springfield. Shortly after he was made bishop he attracted the attention of both the clerical and the lay world by his stirring appeal to Catholics and non-Catholics to rally to the support of the mother church in order to fight the forces of those who wished to upset the established rule of law and order.

Later Bishop O'Leary sent out an edict to the pastors in his bishopric to demand hereafter of non-Catholics who marry Catholics a six weeks' course of instruction in the Roman Catholic faith. The bishopric pointed out that this was not for the purpose of converting these people to his faith, but to make them familiar with the obligations they must assume at marriage.

dus may not even approach within a certain distance of them, and the very sight of others defiles the superior eyes that look upon them.

Until India solves the problem of her own 40,000,000 degraded "untouchables" she can hardly expect to solve her more important problems.

HOWEVER, we need not feel too proud of ourselves in this country, for while we haven't any race of "untouchables, unapproachables and invisibles," we have our race and religious hatreds that are sufficiently disgraceful in a people imagining themselves to be enlightened.

MORE THAN ten million mothers will wonder, shudder and marvel when they read of a Spanish woman of Valladolid, Mrs. Lorenzo, who has given birth to her twenty-ninth son in the sixty-eighth year of her age.

Abraham's wife may have been older when she presented a son to her husband, and he, and she, in cold blooded cruelty, "drove a poor slave girl out into the desert." But that story of Abraham is in the Bible far back.

If anything could amaze and interest women, it would be the case of a woman with twenty-nine sons, no daughter, and giving birth to the twenty-ninth boy at sixty-eight years of age.

The chances are 3,300 to 1 against a woman past fifty becoming a mother, which seems a great pity, but nature probably knows best.

A mother gives her children both brain and body. It is probably necessary for her to have children while the body is at its best.

It doesn't matter so much with men. They only contribute part of the child's mind, and frequently not much of that.

Statistics in heredity show that the greatness of fathers is inherited at least ninety times out of a hundred through the daughters. Therefore, fathers, of whom ninety-nine out of a hundred secretly consider themselves great, should want daughters.

Ex-Empress Dying

Where Is She?

Miss Muriel Dunfee, who vanished from home a year ago and whom mother seeks for Christmas reunion.

MOTHER SEEKS GIRL, MISSING A YEAR

Grief-stricken because she fears another Christmas will go by without word of her daughter, Muriel Dunfee, Mrs. Edith D. Burnham of Wellesley has appealed to the Boston Evening American to help locate the girl. The daughter is a child by Mrs. Burnham's first marriage.

The mother is soon leaving for the South and is making a last effort to locate the missing girl. She disappeared from her home a year ago this month following a quarrel with her mother over a boy friend with whom she was attending parties.

"Muriel does not know where to reach me now and perhaps she does not care to but before I leave Boston I want to say a last farewell to her and give her a present I have been saving for Christmas in hopes she would come back," explained Mrs. Burnham.

"It looks now as though I will not see her, but through the American I am going to ask her to meet me for the last time at our old meeting place, the Adams House. I only want to say good-by to her and wish her luck."

The last seen of Muriel she was walking through the Fenway. She had two prize bull terriers with her, her mother says. All efforts to locate the girl have failed, but Mrs. Burnham is positive her daughter is still living in Boston.

The girl is of light complexion, blue eyes and light brown bobbed hair. She had just completed a business course at Burdett College when she disappeared.

SLOGAN WANTED FOR N. E. GOODS

Possible trade slogans for New England made goods were discussed at a conference at the State House, called by Governor Fuller and attended by business men, bankers, newspaper editors and advertising men among whom were A. H. Marchant, advertising manager of the Boston Post and Edgar D. Shaw, publisher of the Boston Evening American.

A contest to arouse public interest in finding a slogan, token or idea which would symbolize New England goods, was suggested by W. Irving Bullard, vice-president of the Merchants National Bank.

Mr. Shaw favored the idea of a contest but said the prizes would have to be commensurate with the importance of the idea.

A sample slogan was advanced by Governor Fuller. It was, "Made in New England," with sub-headings, "Skilled Workmen," "Finest Technical Schools," "Quality Manufacturers for Generations."

WOLLASTON MAN FINDS BABY IN HAMMOCK

An unknown person abandoned the baby during the height of the storm. Blackman was in the house at the time and was startled to hear a child crying. Investigating, he found the baby wrapped in blankets in the hammock. The baby was dressed in clothes of fine texture and appeared to have had good care. He is a month old.

Blackman notified the police and the child was taken to Quincy Hospital. Inspector Daniel H. Dolan was assigned the task of finding the mother.

PORTLAND HARBOR LIGHT TO BE ELECTRIFIED

Portland, Me., Dec. 5 (A.P.)—Two Lights, the great beacon that looks across Casco Bay from its perch on the rugged shores of Cape Elizabeth at the entrance of Portland harbor, has yielded at last to electricity.

Some time this month the old system of illumination by incandescent oil vapors will pass on, and a new light with a luminous range of forty miles, will guide shipping past perilous rocks and into the sheltered waters of the harbor.

SHUBERTIAN EYE IS ALWAYS IN FOCUS

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

LEE SHUBERT is not a demonstrative citizen. Of the two busy brothers of the American theatre, he is the less volcanic in the daily routine of making the drama bigger, better and more bustling. However, Mr. Lee Shubert is well able to climb hard and fast upon the heels of a conclusion when once it crosses his path; he knows talent when he sees it and his eye is not yet dimmed to the value of beauty when it is properly blended with art. Frankly he is a good picker. This story concerns Mr. Shubert only by chance—yet he is the foundation of it.

* * *

BECAUSE Lee Shubert had nothing more important to do on a warm Summer's night in Paris, he dropped in on the widely acclaimed Folies Bergere. And because he did just that, Lucyenne Herval, ravishing beauty of the Parisian stage and toast of the boulevards, is singing the role of the Princess in "The Student Prince" at the Shubert. The trained eye of the elder Shubert blinked at the dazzling Lucyenne and it was a foregone conclusion that in another season a new luminary would be shedding light on old Broadway. Lee Shubert now makes his exit from the story; Miss Herval enters. The young lady who had thus impressed herself upon the chief of the biggest producing combination in the American theatre was more than a queenly beauty, although that advantage was not to be sneered at in any company. She possessed talent that ran far ahead of the usual schedule of such things in musical revue. Dramatic art may not be important in the girlie shows we know so well, but it certainly causes no damage when discovered in out of the way places. In Paris Miss Herval was doing Cleopatra and the Empress Josephine in pretentious revues. They were regal characters—regally done. In voice and gesture, and in inspiring pulchritude, she was a queen right out of the royal palace.

LUCYENNE HERVAL
Caught in Paris by Lee Shubert—now almost a Yankee.

* * *

THESE were the things that caught the Shubertian eye and aroused the man to action. In twenty-four hours Miss Herval was showing her girl friends a copy of the much coveted American contract.

FROLICKING MR. CATLETT SEES DUTY—AND DOES IT

JUST how much a smoothly running comedian may mean to a musical comedy is shown in the heavily talented "Lady Be Good" at the Colonial. Crowded with material that would provide a suitable working basis for two musical shows, Walter Catlett, the lone comedian of the company, takes things in his own hands for the greater part of the performance. He dominates the show with a brand of chatter that scratches every funny bone in the theatre. And yet Catlett is not the whole show. Unquestionably Mr. Catlett cuts a deeper path through "Lady Be Good" than the authors intended, for there is a wealth of novelty and color quite apart from the mere comicalities of a trained funny man. Carefully analyzed, Catlett not only is not the whole show, nor perhaps its most important toiler, but he does make it sure-fire as you know it back of the footlights. He is the seasoning that makes the dish ready for the table. Eddie Dowling, himself a fairly adroit comedian, once told the writer that Walter Catlett was the most valuable man in musical comedy—the best funny man in the land for a show just aching for that last despairing item needed to insure box office success. "He's an irresponsible comedian," said Dowling; "you never can tell what Catlett will do or say, but he never fumbles an opportunity or misses the main chance. You can turn Catlett loose anywhere in a musical comedy and feel sure that no mistakes will come into bloom."

WALTER CATLETT

Nance O'Neil All Dressed Up In 'Stronger Than Love'

Here is a pleasant little surprise for the many feminine admirers of Nance O'Neil. This talented actress is coming to the Park Theatre soon in "Stronger Than Love"—and she is going to appear in the very latest fashion creations. Miss O'Neil has been cast in so many character roles in recent years, that she has been without an opportunity to wear the pretty gowns so dear to the hearts of the fair sex. As Raimunda, the Spanish peasant woman in "The Passion Flower," her costumes were of the type that were designed to make her appear as unattractive as possible.

Nance O'Neil

But now all is changed. As a member of the French aristocracy Miss O'Neil can indulge her desire for pretty clothes to her heart's content.

CORTEZ RECITAL.

Leonora Cortez, young American pianist, who recently concluded a successful tour of Europe, is to make her first Boston appearance at Steinert Hall on Monday evening.

PHONOFILM AT TEMPLE FOR FEATURE

Lee De Forest has exceeded his former radio triumphs with the Phonofilm—audible screen pictures which are to be presented for a special engagement at Tremont Temple, beginning Monday evening.

In the Phonofilm, Dr. De Forest has attained marvellous results in a field which has engaged the attention of scientists and theatrical magnates since motion pictures first became a fixture in the amusement world. Despite the great art of the motion picture, there has always been lacking the power of the human voice.

Now De Forest has provided it, and the program at the Temple will show some of the world's greatest artists. Weber & Fields head the program, being shown in their famous "pool room" scene.

NEXT WEEK'S NEW BILLS

TREMONT—Leon Errol in "Louie the 14th." Florenz Ziegfeld's most pretentious musical comedy; book by Arthur Wimperis; music by Sigmund Romberg; staged by Edward Royce. In the supporting cast are Doris Patston, an English girl brought here for this production; Ethel Shutta, comedienne; Maj. Hugh Wakefield, Evelyn Law, Elsa Ersi, Edna Corey and a Ziegfeld glorified chorus.

* * *

REPERTORY—"The Wild Duck," a famous drama by Henrik Ibsen. Blanche Yurka joins the company as a guest artist and will appear as Gina, a role in which she won high praise from New York critics a year ago. In the supporting cast are Arthur Behrens, Horace Pollock, Dallas Anderson, John Thorn, Lenore Chippendale, Margaret Entwistle and William Kershaw.

* * *

COPLEY—"Captain Applejack," a romantic, fantastic comedy by Walter Hackett. A rollicking story with comedy pirates. The cast will include Katherine Standing, Edna Ediss, Elspeth Dudgeon, Jessamine Newcombe, Alan Mowbray, C. Wordley Hulse, E. E. Clive, Victor Tandy, Richard Whorf and Terrance Neill. Staged by Mr. Clive.

MONDAY SYMPHONY.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will give the first concert of the Monday series in Symphony Hall on Monday evening. Serge Koussevitzky will conduct Liadov's symphonic picture, "Fragment From the Apocalypse," and "Kikimora," a fairy folk-tale; Rimsky-Korsakov's suite from the opera, "Tsar Saltan"; and Brahms' Symphony No. 1 in C minor.

TIME AND TIDE NO FEAR FOR ANNETTE

Determination has met Time in the presence of a modern Venus of the Seas and Time has taken the count.

Annette Kellerman, who has stood for the things a super-mermaid should be, stood for them years ago and is still supreme. "I haven't varied three pounds in weight in the last fifteen years," said Miss Kellerman with a toss of her high held head. "My measurements haven't changed a sixteenth of an inch. I exercise more strenuously now than I have at any time in my life."

There you are, dear Mrs. Moribund. Just keep eating and staying abed mornings and you will grow four cascades, where already there are two. You can't be an Annette Kellerman unless you develop a spine as well as an appetite.

Looking Ahead

Blanche Yurka Guest Star For Ibsen's 'Wild Duck'

Blanche Yurka, who comes to The Repertory Theatre next week as guest artist, will play the role of Gina in Ibsen's "The Wild Duck." This production had a long run on Broadway last season at the Actor's Theatre with Miss Yurka in the same role.

Her interpretation was acclaimed as one of the greatest characterizations in recent years. Of it Percy Hammond said, "It is a fine achievement, bred in the deep purple of intelligence."

Equally enthusiastic was Gordon Whyte, who wrote "Blanche Yurka gave a truly beautiful and sincere rendition of the role." "There was no meaningless gesturing, no forcing, nothing to detract from the exact image of the characterization."

STAGE AND SCREEN

This Makes "Abie" Popular.

"Abie's Irish Rose," according to one lay critic, is popular because it harks back to the halcyon days when "rags were royal raiment, if worn for virtue's sake," and all fireside jokes were "fit to print."

REAL FALL FOR BIG CAST IN NEW FILM

Within five hours of the Shenandoah disaster, another Zeppelin crashed amidships by an airplane, plunged earthward with 20 passengers and almost miraculously came to an easy stop within ten feet of the ground at the First National studios in Hollywood. Thus suspended by invisible supports, the huge Zeppelin remained until all passengers had disembarked.

"The biggest thrill we ever had," exclaimed the 20 unhurt sky commutors as they stepped down the ladders out of the craft. They were "extras" employed for the filming of "We Moderns," coming to the Metropolitan.

The airanchored craft was then cut adrift to continue its plunge and complete its demolition. And all the while—of course—the cameras whirred. The Zeppelin was a realistic replica of the accepted navy type. A small fortune was spent on this scene, which required hardly seven minutes to photograph.

Galsworthy No Prodigy In Youthful Endeavors

Great men, it seems, fall into two classes, those who were child prodigies and those who were not. John Galsworthy, author of George Arliss' present starring vehicle "Old English" at the Wilbur, gave no particular promise as a youthful genius. Being the son of an English barrister, he was educated at Harrow and Oxford and later followed his father in the practice of law. His profession was, however, very distasteful to him and he took to the avocation of globe-trotting. During his extensive travels, he became a close friend of the late Joseph Conrad and it is very likely that his intimacy with the great novelist eventually awakened Galsworthy's interest in writing.

ZIEGFELD--SHOWMAN

Though Florenz Ziegfeld is one of the best known characters in the world of the theatres, he is, at the same time, one of the least known. He is seen more infrequently than any other producer.

Though his chief interest is in the theatre, he seldom enters one and even when he steps in to have a glance at "Louie the 14th," which comes to the Tremont Theatre on Monday, he mingles with the standees, takes a quick survey, and then disappears.

What is Ziegfeld like? The answer is simple. He is a multiplicity of talents, all diversified, all keen. He is a man who does from three to five things at once, and does every one of them well. He is the last one to leave his offices at night. He is the first one up in the morning. His imagination is insatiable. He wants to create beauty and to make the world laugh.

He is sensitive, diversified, artistic, daring, fun-loving, a supreme showman. His accomplishments in regard to the glorification of the American girl have established a standard of beauty that will be historical.

The Ziegfeld girl always has poise, that marvelous something which comes from thorough training. She has magnetism and a personal charm that gains her the entree into the most cosmopolitan social, theatrical and artistic circles.

The greatest artists in the land and the motion picture world have been quick to recognize the distinctive qualities of the Ziegfeld girl and scores of American beauties have been "kidnaped" for the silent drama. They all know a Ziegfeld girl as soon as they see one.

FLORENZ ZIEGFELD—The man who glorified the show girl and helped make the American theatre a real institution.

FIRST RUNS FOR NEXT WEEK

METROPOLITAN—Colleen Moore in "We Moderns." An adaptation of Israel Zangwill's stage play of the same name. Miss Moore is once more shown as an advanced type of American girl. In the supporting cast are Jack Mulhall, Carl Miller, Claude Gillingwater, Clarissa Selwyne, Marcella Corday and Blanche Payson.

* * *

NEW BOSTON—House Peters in "The Storm Breaker." A story of adventure adapted from Charles Guernon's sea narrative, "The Titans." Featured with Mr. Peters is Ruth Clifford. Other films and vaudeville.

* * *

OLYMPIA—(Starting tomorrow) "The New Commandment." A screen adaptation of Frederick Palmer's "Invisible Wounds." Contains laughs, thrills and romance. In the cast are Blanche Sweet, Ben Lyon, Holbrook Blinn, George Cooper, Pedro De Cordova, Dianna Kane and Effie Shannon.

* * *

LOEW'S STATE—Rudolph Valentino in "The Eagle." A story of Russia before the revolution. A new kind of a picture for Valentino; has comedy as well as drama and finally presents the hero as a bandit.

* * *

FENWAY—(Starting today) "The Ancient Highway," a James Oliver Curwood story of the Canadian timber country. In the cast are Jack Holt, Billie Dove, Montague Love, Stanley Taylor, Lloyd Whitlock and Marjorie Bonner.

Changes in Vaudeville

KEITH'S—Annette Kellerman, exponent of physical education and aquatic star, in songs, dances and diving, assisted by Castleton and Mack; the Knickerbocker Club, winners of the New England championship in the national quartet contest; Coram, ventriloquist; Powers and Wallace in "Georgia"; Claude and Marion in "Still Arguing"; Williams and Taylor, colored dancers, and other features.

* * *

ORPHEUM—Johnson, Johnson and Johnson in a singing and dancing act called "A Corking Revue"; Fulton and Parker in a half-hour of comedy; Al Abbott and his "Home Talent Show"; Marcus and Booth in "Laughing Matters"; and Albright and Hart, with the Three Nitoes, in a unique sketch. The film feature for the week will be Marion Davies in "Lights of Old Broadway."

BAUER FIRST OF SEASON'S GUESTS

By MOSES SMITH

The most interesting feature of the Symphony Concerts for this week is the appearance of the first soloist of the season, Harold Bauer, who plays the piano part in Brahms' D minor Concerto. When Mr. Bauer made his first American appearance almost twenty-five years ago, he played this same Concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Yesterday's appearance, therefore, served as a sort of celebration, in which the audience participated very freely, for it gave Mr. Bauer a very long ovation.

He deserved the applause, for he plays the Brahms Concerto as one of the gods might. Superb piano playing, matched by superb performance on the art of the orchestra and Mr. Koussevitzky, made the playing of the Concerto a memorable occasion. It is a pleasure rare in the concert hall to meet with so happy a combination of forces.

Of the other items on a Symphony-less program, the new one was a Symphonic Poem, "Memories of My Childhood," by Charles Martin Loeffler, eminent composer of this city. In this piece Mr. Loeffler recalls life in a Russian village in which he spent part of his youth.

The piece was given a fine performance by orchestra and conductor.

Big Poundage Difference For These Comedians

The trifling matter of 145 pounds marks the difference between the two comedians in the new Greenwich Village Follies at the Majestic.

The lath-like Tom Howard, droll and bucolic, causes no agitation to a scale set at the 125 pound mark. His associate in the jocular proceedings, Frank McIntyre, is built on the generous proportions of an interurban bus and displaces so much water that Long Island shore dwellers eye him with fear when observing him in a bathing suit.

Mr. McIntyre weighs 265 pounds.

ERLANGER IS VETERAN OF THE DRAMA

A. L. Erlanger

The theatregoing public have long since come to know that when "A. L. Erlanger presents" appears at the head of a play it means something.

It is a matter of record that in his long career as a producer he has never allowed his name to be associated with an off-color play. The latest Erlanger production, "The Kick Off" at the Hollis street Theatre, was written by Grantland Rice and Frank Craven, and is a comedy in three acts and seven scenes with over seventy people employed in its presentation.

Mr. Erlanger has devoted his life to the theatrical business from his boyhood days in Cleveland as treasurer of the late Mark Hanna's old Euclid Avenue Opera House to the present time.

Following "Captain Applejack" which begins Monday, "The Sport of Kings," another London hit, will be presented for the first time in America. This will be followed by a Christmas entertainment, along the order of the London pantomimes and will incorporate the story of Robinson Crusoe. This piece will make an especial appeal to the younger element. Early in the New Year will come "A Grain of Mustard Seed" which Mr. Clive secured when he was abroad last Summer.

MOTHERS PLEAD FOR JOYS OF CHRISTMAS

as I have never did this before I am a little American girl born in this state also my father and mother. Mamma has been in the hosepille eight weeks and is not very well yet. Now dear old Santa caluse we need a lot more things but I hate to tell you all we need. I will have to close wishing you a happy Christmas and a glad New Year. MARGARET.

She lives in the South End.

Step up, Good Fellows!

It is the plan of the Boston Evening American to have as many of its readers as can play the Good Fellow at Christmastide that the luckless children may have opportunity to smile when the dawn of Christmas breaks.

From day to day this newspaper will publish letters from children who write of their Christmas needs and longings—and many of them have their needs filled or their longings satisfied.

PLAY SANTA CLAUS.

All you have to do is to write the Good Fellow Editor of the Boston Evening American for the names and addresses for which you wish to act as Santa Claus.

Or you can write to the Good Fellow Editor, stating that you want to play Santa Claus to some needy family and children and will be furnished with a case to take care of yourself and by your own method.

The Good Fellow Editor plans to give each Good Fellow a case which he or she can handle with ease and facility.

Dear Santa Claus:

Do you think you shall be able to call on us after you visit the other poor children?

Daddy has been sent away to spend his Christmas in the House of Correction. We all have such trust in God that we feel he is coming out a new man. He had been out of work so long mother said he just got discouraged and she just kneels down with my baby sister Helen, age 3 years, and my sister Marion, age 6 years, and asks us all to pray to keep God with Daddy every second.

My sisters Marion and Helen do not know where Daddy is—but Mother says he is working away off and will come home some day.

I am 10 yrs. old February and I am a great help to mother. I want to help to make Christmas pleasant for mother and sisters. Will you help me, please, but be sure and don't let some other poor little girl or boy go without for us or we would be unhappy.

L. J. R.

(She lives in the South End.)

Editor Boston American:—I am a little Boy five years old. Have been longing each Christmas for an Automobile and have not got one yet. My father does not get much money, and we have a hard time to get along. I have a sister almost 2 years old and a brother five months. If you know any little boy that has an automobile to give away. Please remember me. My name is George C. Beardsley (by proxy.)

(He lives in Roxbury.)

A MOTHER'S APPEAL.

My Dear Editor—I am now writing a note to ask you if you will kindly have some of your readers to please try and send some of your toys and things to make a happy Christmas for my little children for my husband has been out of work over eleven months and he has just got a job and I have five, a boy 11 years and girls 6 years, 4, 3, and boy one year and I am sickly and can not go help to work they all need coats to keep them warm now I hope you will be so good as to remember us for it takes every penny to run the house and pay rent. I am yours truly

MRS. A. W. H.

(She lives in Roxbury.)

Dear Santa and Good Fellow:—I read the paper every night of the good fellow and kind heart you have for the poor little children there is six of us my sister is 12 years another 3 years and brothers 8 and 6 years 6 months and I am 10 years if you could send my brothers and sisters something to make them happy on Christmas and my poor mother that likes us to be happy as Mother is wonderful to us I dont mind myself as I am willing to do without nothing if my Ma got some nice warm stockings as she don't wear silk ones.

PROVIDENCE WIFE DROWNS SELF IN PARK POND

Providence, Dec. 5.—The body of Mrs. Ida Levinson, thirty-six, of No. 82 Glenham street, was found floating in the pond in Roger Williams Park today. The medical examiner found she was a suicide.

The body was discovered by Miss Gertrude F. Oakley of No. 90 Harrison avenue. Mrs. Levinson was the wife of Abraham Levinson. According to friends she had been despondent.

DOG BARKS ALARM FOR LYNN FIRE

Six Lynn people are today petting "Buster," a collie owned by James P. Brennan of No. 21 West Green street, for barking so that his master discovered a fire in the two-family house next door. Jacob Sarnessian is particularly fond of "Buster."

JURY DECIDES KIP WAS NOT DECEIVED

Former Judge Isaac N. Mills, his chief counsel, said that his client had heard the early reports circulated that the jury's findings were not favorable, and that he did not want to appear in court and hear them.

Mrs. Rhinelander sat motionless and expressionless for a few minutes following the reading of the jury's report. Her father and mother and sisters, sitting around her, exchanged smiling glances.

COURT WARNS CROWD.

Justice Morschauser entered the crowded court room at exactly 10 a. m. He announced that the slightest attempt at a demonstration when the answers were read would result in prosecution for contempt of court.

"I want you to know this is no circus," he said.

Immediately after the jury's findings had been read, Isaac N. Mills, counsel for Rhinelander, moved to have the verdict set aside as being contrary to the weight of evidence. Justice Morschuser reserved decision on the motion. Attorney Mills later said an appeal will be taken in the case.

Attorney Davis, for Mrs. Kip, said he will bring immediate suit against Rhinelander for separation and support.

"They never can live together, and it is no more than right that Rhinelander should support her," said Davis.

When Mrs. Kip was asked if she still loved Leonard, she said:

"Well, I don't know. I do and I don't." Asked if she was happy at the outcome of the suit, she said:

"I am not happy over the torture I have gone through. It's been terrible. But I am gratified over the verdict."

A victory for Mrs. Kip was rumored in the courtroom early today and long before the jury's report had been read. These reports said the jury stood ten to two in the wife's favor.

The jury deliberated the case from 11:27 o'clock yesterday morning, being out exactly twelve hours before they reached their decision.

CLIMAXED LONG TRIAL.

The verdict climaxed a four weeks' legal battle filled with sensational disclosures and marked by tempestuous clashes between opposing counsel.

A light was burning in the humble Jones home in New Rochelle early this morning when reporters knocked at the door to bring tidings of the rumor that Alice had won. Mrs. Jones, looking extremely tired and worn, answered.

"We're reporters," she was told.

"Please go away," she said. "Were tired and we have nothing to say."

BRIDE IS "SO HAPPY."

"But we bring you wonderful news," she was told.

A few reporters finally were admitted and they told Alice and her family that the decision was reported to be in her favor. The eyes of Rhinelander's bride seemed to light up and her arms went about a woman reporter's neck in a warm embrace. Tears rolled down her face as she sobbed:

"Oh, God! What a wonderful message you have brought to me. Oh! I'm so happy. I'm so happy!"

Mills Congratulates His Opponent on Verdict

White Plains, N. Y., Dec. 5.—When the Rhinelander jury returned its verdict today in favor of Kip's dusky bride, Attorney Isaac N. Mills, chief counsel for Kip, turned to Lee Parsons Davis, opposing counsel, and said:

"I want to congratulate my adversary on his great personal victory. I have never known a lawyer at this bar to have a greater one."

He then made the customary motion that the court set aside the verdict as contrary to the weight of evidence. The aged lawyer, plainly perturbed, was permitted to argue his motion at once.

Justice Morschauser, after listening to Mills' arguments, announced that he would take the motion under advisement.

THE SHEPARD STORES
By Martha Lee
ECONOMY DAY.

LET'S start our economies today with breakfast. Half an orange, a cup of fragrant coffee (and there's a marvelous new percolator on the market that makes coffee as clear and fragrant as old wine), and hot buttered muffins really make a substantial breakfast for all but the heartiest eaters. Bacon muffins are petizing and economical. This is the "how" of them:

Recipe No. 1819

BACON MUFFINS.

- ¼ pound bacon cut in bits.
- 1 tablespoon sugar.
- 1 well-beaten egg.
- ¾ teaspoon salt.
- 1⅓ cups milk.
- 2½ cups bread flour.
- 5 teaspoons baking powder.

Fry the bacon till crisp. Cream together two tablespoons of the bacon fat and the sugar, add the well-beaten egg and the milk. Mix baking powder and salt with the flour, stir into the mixture, and stir in the bacon. Pour into greased muffin pans. Bake 25 minutes in a moderately hot oven.

Cornmeal when properly cooked is not to be despised as an aid to cooking economy.

Recipe No. 1821

CORN COBBLER.

- ½ cup cornmeal.
- 1 cup flour.
- 1 teaspoon salt.
- 2 teaspoons baking powder.
- 1 teaspoon soda.
- 1⅓ cups buttermilk or sour milk.
- 2 cups applesauce, sweetened with ¼ cup corn syrup.
- 1 tablespoon powdered sugar.

Mix and sift dry ingredients together, add buttermilk or sour milk to make a batter thick enough to drop from a spoon on a hot, greased griddle. This makes 12 cakes. When serving, place applesauce between 2 cakes and sprinkle powdered sugar very lightly on top. Serve hot with top milk or thin cream.

Another very good pudding can be made from left over boiled rice. It is called "Poor Man's Pudding."

Recipe No. 1822

POOR MAN'S PUDDING.

- 2 cups cold boiled rice.
- 3 cups hot milk.
- ¼ cup molasses.
- ¼ cup raisins.
- 1 tablespoon butter.
- 1 teaspoon salt.
- 1 teaspoon nutmeg.

Mix the rice and hot milk together. Add the molasses, raisins, butter, salt and nutmeg. Pour into a buttered baking dish and bake very slowly about 1 hour. Stir once or twice during the first half-hour.

UNCLE SAM CAN HELP IN PRIZE CONTEST

By MARTHA LEE

The weather we have been having really isn't ideal for calling on the friends that you are anxious to enroll as members of the WNAC American Women's Club, thereby getting in line for one of the many valuable prizes which are offered our club members this month.

But don't forget that Uncle Sam is a willing worker and a two cent stamp will carry a little note of explanation and a membership coupon to your acquaintances. The telephone is a valuable ally, too.

Of course you have read before this that the object of our Women's Club contest this month is to secure new members for the WNAC American Women's Club, the one condition being that each application for membership shall be signed by the new member and the application either cut from the Boston Evening American or secured from me.

Valuable prizes described below will be awarded the members sending in the largest number of signed coupons.

You may have all the extra coupons you wish. I am expecting a new supply from the printers Monday and know all those of you who are waiting for them will be patient just a little longer.

There are two major prizes, the first, one of the well-known Hoosier kitchen cabinets. This is the "Beauty" type in gray enamel decorated in Delphi blue. It is complete with glass ware for spices and dry groceries, and has the very latest improvements known to the kitchen cabinet world.

GENEROUS PRIZES.

The other major prize is a 5-tube A. C. Dayton radio set. Through the generosity of the A. C. Electrical Mfg. Company of Dayton, Ohio, the radio set is complete with a Splitdorf loud speaker, Yale A battery, Everready Batteries, and five Cunningham tubes.

It is operating right now here in our Clubroom, without any ground or antenna and I hope you'll have an opportunity to drop in and hear its wonderful tone.

The third prize is a Gruen Wrist Watch. Gruen watches long ago established a reputation for perfect as well as beautiful time keepers.

The fourth prize, a tea wagon in the popular brown mahogany, has rubber tired wheels and handle, and is donated by Ferdinand's Furniture Store, where your grandmother probably traded in Roxbury.

The fifth prize is donated by Jones, McDuffee & Stratton Company, Boston popular china and glassware store. It consists of six real Wedgwood plates of English bone china and six of the latest wrinkle in soup plates of clear crystal glass. These plates may also be used for serving melons, oysters, grapefruit and oranges in a bed of ice.

BATHROOM EQUIPMENT.

The sixth prize, donated by the Standard Plate Glass Company of Boston, is a complete bathroom equipment of the beautiful SnoWhite enamel ware. It includes a beautiful plate glass mirror, shelf, tumbler holder and tumbler, two soap dishes, two towel bars, hooks, etc., in the beautiful SnoWhite enamel which never crazes or chips.

The winner of the seventh prize will be relieved of dish washing for life. Her Dario dish washer, which has been donated by the Dario Company, will do this for her. The Dario fits under any faucet and comes complete—soap container, hose and drainer and two strong brushes for pots and pans.

The O'Cedar Company have donated the next 25 prizes, which are combinations of the world famous O'Cedar products.

MORE PRIZES.

The eighth prize consists of big O'Cedar polish mop, dusting mop, floor duster, wall duster, hand duster, can wax, dust cloth and a gallon of O'Cedar polish.

Ninth prize, two O'Cedar mops, wall duster, hand duster, 1 lb. wax, dust cloth and a gallon of O'Cedar polish.

The twelfth prize, two O'Cedar mops, wall duster, dust cloth, one pound wax, one quart polish.

The thirteenth, fourteenth, fifteenth, sixteenth, seventeenth, eighteenth, nineteenth, twentieth and twenty-first and twenty-second are each two O'Cedar mops, wall mop, dust cloth and one quart polish.

The twenty-third, twenty-fourth, twenty-fifth twenty-sixth, twenty-seventh, twenty-eighth, twenty-ninth, thirtieth, thirty-first and thirty-second prizes are each composed of two O'Cedar mops, dust cloth, hand duster and one quart polish.

All useful, worthwhile prizes that will delight the housewife.

The thirty-third, thirty-fouth and thirty-fifth prizes are third salesman's boxes of the Pure Slade's products, donated by the D. & L. Slade Company of Boston. Each salesman's box contains one package each of allspice, cinnamon, ginger, cloves, lemon extract, tapioca, mustard, cream of tartar, vanilla extract, nutmeg, black pepper, red pepper, seasonings, baking soda and baking powder. ## NEW ITALIAN LINER ON ITS MAIDEN TRIP

Steamship agents and representatives of the leading newspapers in New England were invited through the Boston office of the Lloyd Sabaudo Line to inspect the new steamship "Conte Biancamano," which arrived at New York on its maiden voyage from Naples and Genoa. A group headed by Henry L. Mulligan, New England passenger agent of the line, left Boston for New York.

The new steamer is said to be the largest, finest and fastest Italian liner ever launched and an indication of the remarkable activity of the Italian merchant marine. Four hundred people from New England and other sections of the country attended the banquet and inspection.

K. C. HEAD RAPS DRYS' APPEAL TO POPE

Jersey City, N. J., Dec. 5 (A.P.).—County Supervisor John F. O'Neill, Supreme Director of the Knights of Columbus and a Knight of St. Gregory, who returned recently from a visit to the Vatican, today denounced the open letter of Clinton N. Howard, chairman of the United Committee for Prohibition Enforcement, to Pope Pius.

Howard in substance had urged the Pope to appeal to American Catholics to support prohibition.

"This unheard of proceeding on the part of Clinton N. Howard is little less than a despicable attempt to hold up the Catholics of the United States as law breakers," O'Neill declared, "just because many of them, like many people of other religious beliefs, feel that the Volstead act ought to be modified and liberalized."

O'Neill asserted that Howard's recent attack on President Coolidge, in which he charged, according to O'Neill, that the President "was not doing enough to enforce the Volstead Act," caused thousands of Protestants to protest.

"Now after that performance," O'Neill protests, "Howard turns to the Pope with a public letter that is little short of insolent and will be resented all over the country as a slur on the Catholic Church and an uncalled for attempt to discredit a large portion of this country's population."

OBERLANDER TO STAR AT FOOTBALL FORUM

Treat and 'Cav' Also to Present Their Views

By JOE CASHMAN

Joe Cashman

The dear old General Public, the scheduled "goat" in the proposed remedies for football" "over-emphasis" by various colleges, is going to have an opportunity of hearing for itself just what the present grid hullabaloo is all about.

Up to date, all Mr. Average Citizen knows about the argument in which he is as much interested as the undergrad and old grad, is what he has read in the columns of his favorite newspaper.

But on next Tuesday evening he will be able to be present while such experts as Herb Treat, Boston Evening American's football writer; "Swede" Oberlander, Dartmouth's All-American back; Bill Cunningham, former Dartmouth star; Joe Koslowsky, former B. C. captain, and possibly Major Cavanaugh, coach at Boston College, explain the situation from every angle. "Cav," who is in Syracuse, N. Y., has promised to be back in time if possible.

INTERESTED IN "OBIE."

This lineup of experts will speak in the American Legion Hall, Central square, Cambridge, at the opening entertainment of the recently formed Cambridge Sportsmen's Club

Admission will be free and everybody is invited to attend and learn what is or isn't the matter with football.

There is much interest over Oberlander's scheduled appearance. The "Big Swede" from Everett, the outstanding back in the country this past season, has never made public his views on the grid game and the fans are anxious to learn whether he believes that the game is overemphasized or whether he agrees with Treat, Cunningham and Cavanaugh to the contrary.

It was quite a task to get "Obie" to agree to be present. When he was first asked, he said it would be impossible since he would be unable to get back to Hanover, N. H., for classes the next morning. Only when the committee on arrangements promised to rush him back by auto immediately after his speech did Oberlander promise to be on hand.

In addition to the talks on football, there will be stories on other sports by Walter "Doc" Gautreau of the Braves, Bill Barrett of the White Sox and Earl Sande, America's greatest jockey, and Mayor Edward W. Quinn of Cambridge.

BOXING PROGRAM.

Between speeches, local talent will perform and several boxing bouts will be put on.

Festivities will start at 8 o'clock and the fans are urged to come early.

The Cambridge Sportsmen's Club, which is headed by City Councillor Daniel P. Leahy, and includes such prominent citizens of the University city as Ex-Congressman Frederick W. Dallinger, Judge Edward J Counihan, Jr., Francis J. Good, State commander of the American Legion; Elliott A. McDowell, State commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars; City Councillor Ralph W. Robart and J. Frank Facey, secretary of the N. E. A. A. A. U. plans to hold smokers regularly during the Winter months at which leaders in the sporting world will speak.

Semi-Pros to End Season Sunday

The South Boston All-Stars will wind up the season at South Boston tomorrow, playing against the Whitman American Legion team. All of the proceeds beyond the actual expenses will be donated to John T. Carr, who is in the Rutland Sanitarium for treatment for injuries received during a football game. The Southies have strengthened for this game, but they will be meeting stiff competition.

The Pere Marquette K. of C. team will journey to Hartford, Ct., tomorrow and play the Hartford Blues, the strongest team the Caseys have ever opposed.

Among the stars who will play for the Hartford Blues will be three of the four famous Horsemen of Notre Dame—Struldeher, Miller and Crowley—all of whom will appear in the backfield. On the line will be such players as Kopf, of Washington and Jefferson; Hunsinger and Strum, of Penn; Case, Gildea and McGrath, of Holy Cross, and Carvey of Notre Dame.

The Fitton A. C. and the Peabody University team will bring the season to a close tomorrow at Peabody.

'Mal' Logan Resigns as Grid Advisor

MALCOLM LOGAN, chairman of the Harvard football advisory committee, has resigned his position and will have no connection with the grid game across the Charles next Fall.

Logan, who was varsity quarterback on the Crimson a decade ago, declared the pressure of outside business prevented him continuing as head of the advisory committee any longer.

Schlesinger Wins At Tennis

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 5 (A.P.)—R. E. Schlesinger won the Victorian Lawn Tennis singles championship today by defeating Mr. Fitchett in straight sets at 6-3, 6-7, 8-1. Gerald Patterson, who had held the title for six years, was eliminated in the third round.

Patterson also lost in the doubles final when he and J. H. Hawkes were defeated by I. D. McInnes and Pat O'Hara Wood at 2-6, 4-6, 7-5, 8-6, 6-4.

YALE ANNOUNCES BOXING SCHEDULE

Captain Warren E. McMann, 1926, of New York City, announced the schedule as follows:

Debaets and Goosens held an advantage of fourteen points in sprints over the rival pace-setting team.

B. A. A. SEXTET PLAYS PERES AT ARENA

By BILL GRIMES

After a lapse of four years, the Pere Marquette Council of the Knights of Columbus hockey club will appear this evening at the New Boston Arena against the Boston Athletic Association in the first club game of the season. Although these teams are both members of the Eastern Hockey Association, the contest will be an exhibition.

Although Coach Leo Hughes has gathered a fine array of young talent for the "Caseys," there appears to be far too much strength in the makeup of the Unicorn sextete for the followers of the "Southies" to hold out any great hopes of a victory.

With few exceptions, the B. A. A. has all the top-notch amateurs of hereabouts on its roster. If properly handled the Back Bay club should run away from any organization in the league. There are few better defences in the game then George Owen, the former Harvard athlete; Buck Dumaine, who, in one year, developed into one of the finest defence men in the East.

Although George Owen found little time for active hockey last year, because his time was practically all taken up with business and in assisting Ned Bigelow with the Harvard team, he is in fine condition and fit to go in and play in mid-season form.

George Owen has been for years and still is one of the most brilliant hockey players ever produced in Greater Boston. He starred with Newton High before he went to Cambridge, found no trouble making the varsity at Harvard and then stepped and made good with a vengeance in club hockey.

There is nothing George Owen can not do in hockey. He is a past master in every branch of the game and it is a treat to the lovers of real hockey to watch the former Crimson star in action.

Crimson Asks Big Swim Pool Before Bigger Stadium

THE Harvard Crimson rose editorially today to take a wallop at Major F. W. Moore, graduate treasurer of the Harvard Athletic Association, and his desire to have the Stadium enlarged or a new one built so all Harvard men can have at least two tickets for the football game with Yale.

So far his requests that something be done have been ignored by President Lowell and the corporation, although he officially has approached them. This is the way the Crimson feels about Mr. Moore's proposition:

> "At the present, nothing would be so short-sighted and foolish as to follow either of these proposals. Harvard is actually handicapped, and handicapped seriously, by inadequate facilities of the kind which promote the general participation of students in athletics.
>
> "A new gymnasium has long been a real necessity. Harvard has no swimming pool worthy of the name, and, though students have petitioned and prayed for one, they must still be content to splash around what is probably the largest bathtub but the smallest swimming pool in the world.
>
> "And there are still far too few squash courts to accommodate the numbers who stand in line every morning to sign up for the privilege of a short half hour of play.
>
> "Harvard is becoming more and more committed to the idea of athletics for all. Sound bodily health is the first essential to the best intellectual and moral development. With an enrolment as large as Harvard has, it is no easy task to provide sufficient facilities to make athletics for all a reasonable possibility.
>
> "After those very real inadequacies are corrected, then will be time to give ear to the secondary interests of athletics which Major Moore seems to have at heart."

Crimson Ice Squad Practices

Twenty-seven red-jerseyed players were sprinkled over the Arena surface at 5 o'clock and these twenty-seven looked like the pick of the squad. With the possible exception of five football men who are to report next week those chosen to skate at the Arena this afternoon seem to be the boys to survive the Monday cut.

Salem Will Play in Florida

After considerable dispute it was finally announced today by Salem High athletic authorities that the undefeated Salem football team would play the Leon High eleven of Tallahassee, Florida, on December 12. The Witches are holding daily workouts at Bertram Field in preparation of the game and the team will leave for the South next Tuesday. Next year the Southern team will be entertained by the Salem team at the Witch City.

JIMMY DYKES MAY JOIN YANKEES

New York, Dec. 5.—Rumors that Marty McManus of the St. Louis Browns or Jimmy Dykes of the Philadelphia Athletics, had been acquired by the New York Yanks in a comprehensive player trade were wafted about Broadway today, following the statement of Miller Huggins that a major league second baseman, identity withheld, already was the property of the local outfit.

Aaron Ward and Wally Pipp were said to have figured in the transaction although what the Browns would want with either was not made altogether clear.

Leslie Burke of the Detroit Tigers; Harold Spurgeon of the Cleveland Indians; Spencer Adams of the Washington Senators and Emory Rigney, another Tiger, also were nominated, although neither Rigney nor Spurgeon is a second baseman.

The Cleveland angle seems the most plausible, as the general understanding is that a Yankee-Indian deal of some kind has been in the making. In their present position, neither club can go wrong and the Indians undoubtedly could use Pipp at first base.

B. U. Six Wins Over Tech, 5-1

The college hockey season opened at the Arena with the B. U. defeating Tech 5 to 1.

There was much scrimmaging in the first period. Lawless scored for B. U. and Weissner followed up on Randall's shot and evened the score.

B. U. was better in the second period, and before it was over the Terriers had a 4 to 1 lead.

Persson Scores K. O.

Stockholm, Dec. 5 (A.P.)—The Swedish heavyweight champion, Harry Persson, knocked out Jack Townsend, American negro heavyweight, in the third round.

Hamer tried centre, but lost two yards. Hamer punted to Frankfords 45-yard line, where the ball dropped dead in the mud. Joe Sternaman fell out of bounds and failed to gain. Joe Sternaman tried to get around right end, ran from one side of the field to the other end, was thrown for a five-yard loss. After a huddle Hanny punted to Homan, who was downed on Frankford's nine-yard line. Sullivan went thrugh right guard for three yards. Stockton, at left tackle, gained one yard. A towel was brought on the field to wipe the ball.

OWNER QUINN will trade anything he has, except the ball park and a few pitchers, who form his only real baseball asset. He is satisfied that almost any position on his club can stand strengthening, but he will not give up box material to improve elsewhere.

His policy, the correct one, is that a club is started toward glory with two or three good young pitchers and a star veteran. He has the [illegible]

Revamped Woodsies Tackle New Bedford

By BILL McAULEY

ANDY STEVENS, the former Boston centre, will lead the attack of the new Bedford Whalers against the Woodsies this afternoon in what promises to be the biggest soccer attraction of the season.

The game will be played at Walpole street and the old ball grounds should hold a record crowd for a soccer game in this city when the kick-off takes place at 2:30 p. m.

This will be the Whalers first visit of the year and they will have in their lineup five stars recently imported from the British Isles who will make their initial appearance before local fans. The game should develop into a real battle as the opposing elevens are evenly matched and both employ the same methods to carry the ball down the field, namely the short passing game which brings out all the fine points and tricks of soccer.

Leading the attack of the Woodsies will be Bobby Blair, the clever centre who is leading Stevens by five goals for top honors. With two such brilliant forwards opposed to each other, those who take in this clash will witness some sensational shooting.

The clubs have met once this season in a league fixture and after a hectic struggle the Whalers got the verdict by a penalty goal scored in the closing minutes of the contest. The Woodsies have dropped four straight games, and Manager Dave Bruntin is predicting that they will get into the win column again at the expense of the Whalers.

Moses Bloom of New York, the king pin of American league referees will have charge of the game. The lineup of the elevens will not be known until game time, but the following will probably take the field:

President May See St. James Play

Washington, Dec. 5—The 15 football fans from Haverhill, Mass. are hoping for sunshine today for the intersectional football game between St. James High and Gonzaga High at the American League Park. The weather here for the past three days has been mild, cloudy and showery. The only fears entertained by Haverhill fans, here for the clash that will settle the Eastern Catholic high school championship, are that the lighter eleven from Massachusetts may be handicapped on a soft and slippery gridiron. The District of Columbia scholastic champions outweigh the St. James players 15 pounds to a man.

The St. James players and Haverhill fans spent the day in sight seeing, their trip ending at the White House, where, headed by Rev. John J. Graham, Alderman Samuel J. Levis and Coach Carroll, they were received by and photographed with President Coolidge and Executive Secretary Everett Sanders.

Congressman Andrew has extended an invitation to the President and Mrs. Coolidge to attend the game and, was assured that they would, if possible, even if only for one period of the contest.

Treat Is Sorry for Harold the Red

By HERB TREAT,
Boston Evening American Football Expert.

Harold "Red" Grange is scheduled to appear at Braves Field next Wednesday with his Chicago Bears and will oppose the strong Providence Steam Roller eleven.

As this game will be the biggest professional football game to be [illegible] in Boston, much enthusiasm is being aroused.

With favorable weather conditions the Tepee should be packed, for it will be the first time New England fans have had an opportunity to gaze upon the popular red head of the West.

Even on a wet field, and the chances are that the ground will be soft, Grange has proven his ability as a great ball carrier. This season against Pennsylvania he ran wild for three touchdowns on a soggy field.

The Bears do not expect an easy game by any means, as they are well aware of the fact that the Rollers are a powerful combination.

This game will be especially interesting to me, as I expect to be playing against the Bears in Florida next month, so we'll do a little scouting even though not organized.

Grange, although one of the great backs of all time, doesn't compare with many of our own stars here in the East. We can look to see if he does any of the following things which the greatest players are expected to do.

(1) Does he interfere?

(2) Does he tackle?

(3) Does he buck the line, run off tackle, around the ends, and does he kick and pass, and is he deceptive?

(4) Is he a specialist? That is, can you tell what he is going to do?

In the great open spaces of the West when a star of fair ability appears on the scene almost in[illegible] the press agenting department starts to work, and how it goes [illegible] the man. He gained more [illegible] miles of ground during his [illegible] and a lot of other similar stuff.

Why, I'll wager that such [illegible] Eddie Tyron have gained four miles but who wants to hear such statistics all the time?

Is Grange a great all-round football player is the question that I want to find out before I accept all these press reports from Urbana, which state that he is the greatest of all time.

It will be a great game. I feel sorry for Grange, in that he's got such a reputation to live up to.

'Red' Greatest of All Feinters

Coaches Don't Seem to Realize Asset

Intuition Great; Good Ring Man

By Ed. W. Smith

WANT to know what makes "Red" Grange one of the greatest athletes of all times? Of course you want to know the secret, and [illegible]

THIS mighty man is the greatest feinter that ever happened. Like the successful jockey and the successful man in [illegible] he is [illegible] patient. He has [illegible] at the exact moment.

IN other words, he is THE GREATEST FEINTER IN THE LINE OF AMATEUR OR PROFESSIONAL ATHLETICS. He knows the time to do the right thing. There is a purpose in everything that he does, but what makes him the great athletic success that he is is the fact that he does things at exactly the right moment.

HE can FEINT. That is to say, he can make the other fellow think that he can do something that instantly he isn't going to do. "Red" is [illegible] a great fighting man. When he gets the ball he seems to be paralyzed with fright. He doesn't seem to know [illegible] to go [illegible] field, [illegible] undecided and [illegible] upon [illegible] a moment. [illegible] is merely a [illegible] on his part. He [illegible] within him and then he shoots this way or that [illegible]

BOXERS do the same thing and the best of them have had great success with it. Few men know how to feint. Most of them feint absolutely without purpose. Many of the younger tribe of boxers feint rapidly and then step back. That is totally at variance with the general idea of the feint. What you want to do when a feint is made is bring your opponent to you and make him do something that he has had no intention of doing, something that you might think he was going to do, and then beat him to it.

IT merely is a matter of outguessing and outfiguring an opponent. That is what Grange is doing all of the time. He is like a [illegible] boxer on the field. He pulls his foeman to him and then does the exact thing they are not looking for. That is the greatest art of any [illegible] of any athletic contest—OUTGUESSING THE OTHER FELLOW.

THERE are few times since the Wheaton iceman has been such a gridiron hero that he hasn't managed to outguess all of them, teams by the score, and some of them the best college players in the business.

GREAT feinters in the fighting business have become some of the best boxers in all divisions. That is why we would say that if Grange decided to become a fighting man he would make one of the greatest we ever had if he were able to stand up physically, and there is no reason to believe that he would not, considering the fact that already he has [illegible] some of the toughest knocks that a man possibly could get, with whole teams piled on him and trying to bring him to the earth.

SPORT EDITORIAL

FOOTBALL is not a game, although it is a sport. It is a sport in the same way as were the jousts and tourneys of the ancient knights. And it serves much the same purpose, namely, to keep men hardened in body and eager in spirit to face the exigencies of life.

The exigencies of life today are less physical than were those of long ago, but they are no less severe.

Football, in the guise of a game, develops, under sporting conditions, the same qualities in men as does war or any other large emergency.

It is different from other games in that it is broader, and its influence on after life is stronger and of greater value.

Therefore it is more than a game. It is a preparatory school for life. The phrase is trite, but it is true.

Why not call it by its right name, and treat it as it deserves?—STED CHANDLER

The Price of Ring Glory

By JACK CONWAY

GEORGE ROBINSON, Cambridge middleweight, has lost the sight of one of his eyes while the sight of the other optic has [illegible] For seventeen years Robinson battled for fame and [illegible] During this time he made a great deal of money, [illegible] Sam Langford and other great negro boxers [illegible] of easy come easy go.

Robinson is today dependent upon the generosity of his friends [illegible] with which to purchase the necessities of life. No longer [illegible] under the glare of the flickering calcium and [illegible] the world's leading middleweights. Instead he is being led around the streets of Cambridge by his friends.

Robinson was one of the greatest of the colored middleweights. He fought Johnny Wilson, Mike McTigue, Jack Delaney, Panama Joe Gans and every other 160-pounder who could be induced to enter a ring with him. He has now met the same fate that fell to the lot of Pete Herman, Honey Mellody and other illustrious knights of the ring.

Perhaps, with the spirit of Christmas filling your heart and with memories of Robinson's brilliant bouts in mind, you may wish to assist him in his hour of need. Contributions can be sent to Robinson in care of the Boxing Commission, State House, Boston.

GENERALS say an army fights best upon an empty stomach. Hunger makes men more vicious, more determined to gain their objective.

The same is true of boxers. Hungry fighters are the best fighters. They are always eager for the sound of the gong which will send them into action.

The Jack Dempsey who knocked out Jess Willard at Toledo was a hungry fighter. He was hungry to become famous, to earn money, to become a champion. He was also not overfed and entered the ring weighing 183 pounds. The big and lazy Willard, his vitality sapped by the luxuries of life, was knocked down every time Dempsey hit him on the chin with a right-hand thrust.

The Dempsey of today, weighing more than 200 pounds, rated as worth a million dollars, a favorite with the moving picture colony at Hollywood, would be knocked out in quick order by a young man with the ability of the Dempsey who stopped Willard.

Money is useful, but in most cases it ruins athletes.

GOVERNOR FULLER'S reappointment of Boxing Commissioner Eugene Buckley for another three-year term made a decided hit with those persons interested in the welfare of boxing in Massachusetts. Prior to the Boxing Commission, the ring game was in a sorry condition here. It was only a question of how soon the lid would be clamped down on it.

President Coolidge, at the time Governor of Massachusetts, surprised some of his friends when he signed a bill legalizing boxing in Massachusetts. He told the newly-appointed Commission that he would give the game a one-year trial and if it was then found objectionable he said he would have the boxing bill appealed.

Commissionr Buckley was a member of the first Commission and it was largely due to his efforts the sport got started properly. He is now associated with Messrs. Foote and Lane, who add power and dignity to the Commission.

Some fine reports are coming out of New York about Billy Burch. Wait until Billy gets in real shape and he will show the Gotham fans how the game should be played.

The Pittsburgh-Les Canadiens game in Montreal last week was one of the roughest ever played in the Mount Royal Rink. There were 19 penalties for fouls, which ranged from minor infringements to near-mayhem.

For the first time since he has been playing hockey, Lionel Conacher, the brilliant Pittsburgh player, was forced to retire from the ice last Saturday in Montreal when a flying puck from Howie Morenz' stick hit him on the ankle.

Sprague Cleghorn, who was injured last week in the Pittsburgh game, will not be able to be used a great deal for a week or so. He will be in shape for the Montreal game, which will be his first contest since he and Conacher collided.

SPORTS are gumming up romance. Agnes Brierly, co-ed at the University of Denver, is an athletic model, and naturally loves athletics [illegible] poor Agnes [illegible] when she found her heart torn between two gridiron warriors and couldn't tell which she wanted.

"I'll [illegible] happy [illegible] either.

ALICE BURKHART, fifteen, of Audubon County, Ia., is going to be a superwoman when she grows up. Of [illegible] farm girls and boys, Alice and George Kuskaden, fourteen, of St. Paul were chosen as the finest physical pair. What a eugenic team they'd make! As a potential wife and mother Alice looks like the best bet in the country.

She is five feet five inches tall and weighs 131 pounds. She milks the cows, rides horseback, swims, plays tennis and basketball, cooks well and ranks high in her studies.

She doesn't do the Charleston, nor smoke cigarettes. Her teeth, feet, body, head, eyes, ears and nose are perfect. In fact, there's only one out about her. Her upper arms show too little muscular development. At least, that's what the doctors who examined her said. But what use has a wife for biceps?

GEORGE, the most perfect boy the country produced, has one filled tooth, slightly enlarged nasal passages and a tendency toward flat footedness. He is five feet, seven inches tall and weighs 155 pounds.

When they asked him what he thought of Alice, he said, "Aw, every feller likes an athletic girl!"

Did you ever hear about Mr. Jack Grace, globe trotter and prize fight emissary? At the moment, he is promoting boxing in Singapore, but once upon a time he founded a school at Hot Springs, Ark., to teach the manly art to members of our so-called gentler sex.

One of his pupils developed so rapidly that she shocked the well-known Mr. Grace for one of those things they call a goal. After that the gentleman declared he would be an enemy to his brother man if he continued to teach ladies the festive science.

For the sake of mankind, he packed his bags and went to Singapore.

Story of a Girl Who Goes Out Into the World to Learn of Love

NANCY HAWTHORNE, motherless, lives in an English country village with her father. She has an experience with Curly Collins, a country boy she has befriended. She discusses what occurs with her father. Then comes a strange stirring and she decides to see the world. In Paris she meets Cornelia Evans, daughter of an American millionaire. The girls form a studio partnership. They give a housewarming. Nancy meets Jean de Courcy, French cavalry lieutenant, who pursues Cornelia. She also meets Count de Bercy Mormal, a man who accosted her in the street. The count is Cornelia's brother-in-law. Nancy scornfully rejects his friendship. Lloyd Evans, Cornelia's brother, and his chum, Bob Whittaker, Oxford undergraduates, telegraph they're coming to Paris. Nancy is strangely affected by the news. Bob comes. Nancy fancies him. Then it dawns on her that she wants to know him better. The girls meet the boys at St. Malo.

CHAPTER 23.

THE stay of Cornelia, Lloyd and Bob at Brendle was of a brevity that made it seem afterwards almost as if they had never come.

Nancy hardly knew whether to laugh or cry. To see them all again was, of course, priceless. Dear old Lloyd had been in extraordinarily good form and Cornelia had been awfully sweet to Dad. So, for that matter, had Bob.

B[illegible] between [illegible] herself [illegible] been [illegible] at [illegible]. When they [illegible] he [illegible] leaping. That was [illegible]. And then when [illegible] of [illegible] that was for her alone. That was [illegible] right [illegible] wonderful and magnificent [illegible] the peace of [illegible] starting everything forward again.

FAILED TO UNDERSTAND

But then—then she didn't understand. Something had shut down, had broken the current between them. In all the laughter and chatter during the rest of the party, she had been alone. Bob, her Bob, had gone away somewhere. She looked at him joked with him.—and he hadn't come back, not the inner he that was for her and for nobody else? In St. Malo there had never been a moment when he had left her alone like that. Bob had always been there, close at her mental elbow.

But today he was not only not there, but she couldn't reach him hadn't reached him, even when they got back in the car and Cornelia had started the engine and Nancy had purposely kissed her again and shaken hands once more with Lloyd as an excuse to be able to do so with Bob.

She had stood there, smiling and waving as they purred away, when all the while it felt as though the whole world were empty.

For a time she stayed there motionless. She turned finally with a deep and thoughtful frown and walked slowly up the lane to the cottage.

REACTION SET IN

A moment later the inevitable reaction set in and a host of reasons began popping up one after the other: it was the first time he had met Dad and of course his attention had been fully occupied; there had been so little time, there was the underlying consciousness of having to drive on schedule; there was the fact of its being her home and his seeing her therefore in unfamiliar surroundings to say nothing of its being in a crowd. Had they been alone together for five minutes, this miserable hiatus, this sickening emptiness, could never have come into being. But at least there was this to be thankful for: Bob was home and now she could write to him. — Thinking back, wasn't it a little queer that he had never once written since she had come home?

Two whole months, and not a line,—not even to say how glad he was that her father hadn't been killed! There had been postcards, of course, but they didn't count.

Funny that she hadn't thought about it before! She had been too occupied with her own end of their relationship. But now it wasn't [illegible] Nancy went [illegible] paper and sat down to [illegible]. Nat[illegible] was [illegible] Jim was leaning with one arm on his chair.

I don't suppose [illegible] twent[illegible] The other lad was [illegible] very charming and entertaining fellow, that American. But although he was the whole show and left a lasting impression, he couldn't altogether extinguish Bob. There was a certain force behind Bob's quietness. He was like an older brother amusedly listening to a younger one showing off before strangers, rather proud of him and pleased with the way the youngster is succeeding, but with a sense of underlying mutual understanding with the others—like a wink between two people at the expense of a third. See what I mean?"

Nancy nodded. "Yes," she said, "I know exactly.—What else did you think about him?"

WAS GOOD LOOKING

Jim pushed down the ashes of his pipe with a gingerly forefinger. "I thought he was extremely good looking," he said. "Good features and a fine body; not an ounce of fat anywhere.

"What's he going to do, the Bar and politics?"

"He doesn't know," said Nancy.

"Is he well off?"

"No, he's a church mouse," said Nancy. "His father's a curate."

"H'm!" said Jim. "Everything ahead of him and nothing behind, eh? If he's a man it may be better for him that way. He looks as if he had determination enough to undertake anything and enough gray matter to put it through. But one would have to see a good deal more of him before one's opinion would be worth anything. The most one can say about him is that he leaves one predisposed in his favor. Lloyd and he are poles apart. That boy is what Kipling calls the Little Brother of all the world. One warms to him from the word 'go,' without any reservations."

"Do you remember the night I came down the hill and told you about Curly?" asked Nancy.

Jim's muscles began to tighten. "For various reasons," he said, "I don't think I shall ever forget it, my dear."

"Do you remember my comparing it to being hit by a cyclone, and saying that one day I wanted that Cyclone to hit me?"

"Yes," said Jim.

"Well—it has."

STARTED TO TOUCH HER

Jim's eyes were on the back of that brown head and those firm shoulders. He put one hand slowly out to touch her. It trembled a little. He thought better of it and withdrew it. "I'm awfully glad, old lady!" he said.

Nancy went on, gathering speed as she went. "I didn't tell you before because I somehow wasn't ready. It was as though it had to become a part of me sufficiently. Tonight's the first time I've wanted to talk about it, though I suppose you've known all along, haven't you, Dad? Haven't I looked different since I came back? It doesn't seem possible for me to have remained the same when I've felt so infinitely much older and realer ever since I loved Bob."

Jim nodded. So it was Bob! "Yes," he said. "There was a change in you and I'd been wondering about it. Would you care to tell me something about it, old lady? When

THE MAKING OF A HUSBAND

By Ann Lisle

"YOU did see it," Jim said quietly. Then he added with third degree sternness. "When?"

"Maybe yesterday," May replied sulkily.

"And what did you do with it?"

"I dunno."

"What did you do with it?" repeated Jim.

May looked to me for help, then shifted her eyes and said, stubbornly:

"Maybe Mrs. Harrison, she put him away."

"Mrs. Harrison knows nothing of the box. She is waiting—just as I am—for you to tell us the truth. Nothing but the truth will do. You had better tell it now, May. We know, anyway," Jim said so coldly that I felt as if the girl must shiver under the hail of his words.

"I take him. I like him. No one used him. He nothing but box soaps and powders. Mens don't use him. I take him," May said brokenly.

"You stole it, eh? Well, we know that. And you stole my wife's purple and lavendar kerchief and the brocade she wanted to use. We know that, too. What have you to say for yourself? What do you think we should do to you?"

"Oh!" May screamed, strangling her cry with the apron which she threw over her head as she slid to a sitting posture on the floor.

As the girl sat there rocking in misery and animal terror, my rage at Jim clutched like a knife at my heart.

"How can you?" I demanded. "Do you like to torture people?"

Jim ignored me.

"Get up and face the music, May," he commanded.

The girl jerked, heaved about for a moment, stumbled to her feet and threw back her apron to reveal a distorted face puffed by tears and fear.

"What do you think we should do to you?" Jim asked.

"You going put me in jail?" she asked brokenly.

"Do you think we should?" Jim inquired in a silken tone.

"I wouldn't do such to you," cried May. "I wouldn't. While you have everything, I don't care. But comes sometimes my little sister maybe to call for me. She tell the pretty thing. She say it nicer here than by studio. Zeke, he tell me all time I shall be careful from Arlette. She like to work by Nick Perry while it so pretty there. She get so she want pretty thing for herself. Maybe he give her. Maybe so she love him—more as me. Maybe so he take her from me. That why I make myself to take a few thing what you no need—what you no use—what I think you not even miss. I take and I give them Arlette. Now you put he in jail. Of Arlette I don't know what become of her then. But I think she hates me always while I in the jail. I think Zeke he never look at me again because I so bad girl."

May Valleau stood leaning heavily against the wall. She jerked out her broken sentences as if each one was a barb to cut her lips. Her face worked as she spoke. Slow tears fell down her red cheeks. The red became mottled. The sullen and sultry beauty I had seen in her face and heavy figure now and then, were gone. The girl was an inert mass of sodden humanity—ugly—grotesque in her pathos.

"You going put me in jail," she asked again.

I leaned forward to protest—to plead with Jim for kindly answer to May Valleau's heart-breaking.

"You going put me in jail?"

But as I turned to Jim he arose [illegible] his chair and went to the window where he stood for a minute blocking off the light as he stared out over the yard where a thin powder of snow was falling slowly and steadily.

THE WONDER OF THINGS

EVERY[illegible]

I have no use for the man who is never astonished, who does not want to be told anything or learn anything.

The American has not this failing. He frankly likes to be told, wants things explained, wants to get right into things, wants to see why.

Again and again I allow the wonder of [illegible] to make [illegible] of my days a new adventure. The wonder of a full grown tree! The upstanding giant, which had been but a pip, a seed, a nut [illegible] roots [illegible] burst asunder a wall or lift up and topple a gravestone!

Think of the wonder of a child growing up! The marvel that the old old man has still the same body as the wee pink baby he was at the beginning of life!

Think of the ebb and flow of the tide; of the incredible life that goes on amongst the creatures beneath the sea!

The human brain is in itself a stupendous thing, wondrous beyond words. And have you ever thought upon the amazing fact that there are no two faces, no two hands, entirely alike in all the world! And yet each face is composed of two eyes, two ears, a nose, a mouth!

I have been traveling about lately, visiting different places, and when I see the Doges' Palace in Venice, the Coliseum of Rome, Windsor Castle, Versailles, the Pyramids — to think they all were made by human hands!

And our ships and trains that we take so casually, our aeroplanes, our printing presses, our machines of every kind!

Everything is wonderful—my hand with its supple fingers, my dog's instincts, the bird's nest, the smell of a rose, Leonardo's pictures, the awakening of Spring, the stars, sun and moon.

Keep thinking of the wonders that surround us and I assure you you will never be bored again in your life!

JOINT-EASE For Stiff, Swollen Joints

Rheumatic or Otherwise

Says: "When Joint-Ease Gets In—Joint Agony Gets Out."

It was a high-class pharmacist who saw prescription after prescription fail to help hundreds of his customers to get rid of rheumatic swellings and stiff inflamed joints.

And it was this same man who asserted that a remedy could and would be compounded that would make creaky, swollen, tormented joints work with just as much smoothness as they ever did.

Now this prescription rightly named Joint-Ease, after being tested successfully on many obstinate cases, is offered through progressive pharmacists to the millions of people who suffer from aching joints that need limbering up.

Swollen, twinges, inflamed, stiff, pain-tormented joints are usually caused by rheumatism but whatever the cause Joint-Ease soaks right in, through skin and flesh and gets right to and corrects the trouble at its source.

Remember Joint-Ease is for ailments of the joints, whether in ankle, knee, hip, elbow, shoulder, spine or finger, and when you rub it on, you may expect speedy and gratifying results.

Carnegie was a [illegible] thropist"—the most generous [illegible] of money that ever [illegible]. He hoarded his wealth instead of sharing it with others. It is estimated that he would have left a fortune of not less than $3[illegible]. He frequently [illegible] rid himself of [illegible] festation, [illegible] 000,000—less [illegible] ican Croesus a hundred [illegible] lars less than his partner, Henry Frick.

His benefactions in America, Scotland and England reach well over $335,000,000. He distributed largess with a lavish hand.

Carnegie pere was a weaver in Dunfermline, Scotland, where our Andy was born. He came to America about 1847 and secured work in a linen mill at Allegheny, and Andy, then eleven years old, became a bobbin boy, then a stationary engineer, then a messenger boy in a railroad [illegible]

[illegible] and then the Carnegie Steel Company. The latter, in 1900, declared a dividend of $40,000,000, and forty men whom Carnegie has raised from the ranks to partnership, had a slice of the melon.

Then Carnegie's last great coup [illegible] the [illegible] United [illegible] Steel [illegible] paid him $[illegible]000,000 for his interest alone in the Carnegie Steel Company, and he signalized his retirement by gifts aggregating $5,000,000 to his old employes.

Carnegie was a short, stocky, hickory knot of a man, his head as round and hard as a golf ball. But it was full of brains. He was the first and shrewdest money maker the world has ever known. Carnegie died in 1913.

LEAH'S LIMBURGER

By Louis Cunningham

AFTER the approved manner of [illegible] long time studying her subject till she knew [illegible] exactly what he would [illegible]

Sniffed the Air

Little Mr. Marx, bald, fiery, ever [illegible] fussing, bounced into the work shop, stared round with a bull-like expression quite out of harmony [illegible] [illegible] better than to have all their necks collected into one that he might throttle it between his twitching hands.

Everyone sewed away. The songs of the shirt had no rests till noon-hour when they were free to go where they would and eat their lunch.

Mr. Marx bounded into the air and jumped on the floor with a crash that shook the walls and made even Leah, the deaf mute, look up to contemplate the rest of [illegible]

"Limburger!" screeched Mr. Marx. "Limburger! Ach, gott! By my [illegible]"

[illegible] Mr. Marx [illegible] toes, he was a real German who loathed Limburger. It was a red, bad smell to the little bull. It moved him to violence.

"Who iss bring Limburger by me? You know I throw it out the window."

No answer.

Pale With Rage

Mr. Marx pranced [illegible] to the place from where the [illegible] came and sniffed out unerringly the fateful cheese.

"Who belongs by dis?" he held his nose in one hand; the parcel in the other.

"Leah! You dumb-deafer! Yesterday I throw your Limburger out! Ferichi?"

The girl, who couldn't hear a word, didn't seem to grasp what he was driving at. She was pale with rage.

Marx held the packet as though it [illegible] cholera morbus and bubonic plague, brandished it in the air with a terrible [illegible] it out the window [illegible] between the buildings.

[illegible] her [illegible] to see [illegible] hot cheese had [illegible] and returned to her work.

Marx, with a [illegible] everyone and a disgusted sniff of the still-tainted air, marched away to his office.

He was too angry to go to work. Instead, he rummaged through his desk, sorting over a lot of odds and ends, hunting for nothing.

Suddenly he sprang up with his usual rocket-like speed and made an attack on his desk. Papers went flying everywhere, ink [illegible] he cut his hand on a penknife. Feverishly he searched.

"Ach, I remember! I leaf it on the desk for a while. Where . . . Gone! Herr gott! Gone!"

Mr. Marx, in a state bordering on apoplexy, tore back to the workshop.

His Fatal Leap

Instead of taking the last three steps that would bring him through the door, he staged a broad-jump which for form at least would have delighted the best track-coach that ever cracked a pistol.

The finish of the leap would have equally ravished the director of movie-comedies of the Larry Semon type. Marx' descending feet lit on a square, odoriferous block that slid like soap, sent him across the room into a sewing-machine and made him execute a perfect nose-dive.

He knew from the start that he [illegible] a banana peel. His nose told him so. Limburger, it smelt like limburger it was.

An Irish janitor, one Jerry McCarthy, stood by while Mr. Marx, furious beyond words, picked himself up.

In excellent German, though he might have used the worst as far as Jerry was concerned, Marx told the ignoble history of the McCarthys from the first bog-trotter who had robbed a cripple down through a number of generations of murderers, thieves, extortioners and worse; ending rather tamely by calling Jerry a long-eared ass.

Somehow Mr. McCarthy grasped the fact that Marx was not reading him an address of felicitation for having restored the cheese which he had seen fall from the window.

"There's yer rotten chase, ye little blaggard," he growled. "'Tis meself that knows it's dear to the heart of yez."

He picked up the crushed relic of the limburger, shoved it under Mr. Marx' tortured nose and placed it carefully in the little man's helpless hand.

Out the Window

Out the window it went again.

Mr. [illegible], with a [illegible] of satisfaction, betook himself to the janitorial sanctum.

Marx suddenly recollected what had brought him back.

"Miss Stekolsky!"

His forelady came tremblingly to the front.

"My ring dat iss too tight I leave off often on my desk sometimes. It iss gone! Who iss come by my office dis mornink?"

"Sam Aranoff," said the forelady.

"Honest," snapped Marx. "I watch him all the time. Who else?"

"I came."

"Dumb," said Marx. "You don't have brains enough to steal. Who else?"

Miss Stekolsky looked around.

"Leah."

"Dumb-deafer!" shouted Marx. "She is a tief. Come here!" he cried to Leah.

She wasn't looking at him. Her face was set and furious.

Marx ran to her, seized her by the shoulders and shook her as if he hoped to make her cough up his [illegible]

She fought him.

"Search her!" commanded Marx dramatically.

Leah was examined from her scanty hair to the holes in her shoes, without success.

The police were called. The place was turned inside out, upside down and front end first, but there was no sign of the ring.

"Three hundred I pay Moss for that ring. It's worth three hundred fifty," iterated and reiterated Mr. Marx. He wrung his hands in misery.

The Cheese Again

Mr. Marx called him a scoundrel and begged the police to arrest him on any charge from perjury to arson.

"See that, ye little leprechaun," grinned Jerry. "See that!"

Mr. Marx stared.

Embedded in the cheese . . . Well in the cheese where the clever Leah had hidden it, was Mr. Marx' solitaire.

FOXY GRANDPA'S BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

"Do you know, Foxy Grandpa, that I hear bees everywhere in this wood? I wonder if they are honey bees."

"I wouldn't be a bit surprised," said Bunny. "I've noticed several big honeycombs and I've noticed something else."

"What?" asked Bobby.

"Perhaps I'll show you," answered Bunny.

Bobby had just bitten into a ham sandwich when he stopped and looked up at the tree. He swallowed his bite and then said:

"We can have honey for dessert, Foxy Grandpa. Look at that honeycomb over there on the tree."

Suddenly we heard something breaking through the brush. We sat very still and Bunny crawled into my pocket.

Nearer it came and nearer, and finally right across from where we were hidden under the bush appeared the muzzle of a bear. Then he lumbered out, and after him came another bear.

I can't say we were entirely comfortable, but we weren't in danger yet. However, when the two bears commenced sniffing I reached for my gun in case they were sniffing at us.

But we soon saw we were not the cause of their coming in our direction. Because what did the big fellow do but walk right over under the tree where Bobby had seen the honeycomb and raise his head and give a grunt of satisfaction as he gazed on the honeycomb with his funny little eyes. Then his wife came up behind him and she gave a grunt.

Then they stood looking at each other. They may have been talking things over for all I know, for they hesitated quite a while.

Finally the big bear raised up on his hind legs and commenced to climb the tree. Up he went, grunting all the while like an old man climbing a steep flight of stairs.

Then we had to laugh, because when he got to a certain point in the tree, he got stuck and couldn't go an inch further!

His wife was swaying back and forth on the ground impatiently. There was the desired honeycomb and there was her husband stuck within ten feet of it!

She growled and she puffed. Then in a few minutes she started up the tree herself. When she reached the big bear who could go no further, she got under him and gave him a boost and pushed him up. Boost by boost she pushed him further up in the tree, until he finally reached the honey-comb and knocked it down on the ground. And did they enjoy that honey? They were so busy gobbling it up that they never even knew there was as much as a rabbit near them, not to mention a boy and a man.

"That's the kind of a wife to have," said Bobby as the bears lumbered off through the woods licking their chops, "she's a real help to her husband."

PAUL J. McCANN,

DR. REED'S SECRETS OF HEALTH

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.
Former President of the American Medical Association.

You may be afflicted with the persistent accumulation of gas in the intestines. This condition is to be distinguished from the accumulation of gas on the stomach which gives rise to the feeling of tightness and actual distension in the upper zone of the abdomen and is relieved only by the act of belching.

In case of gas in the intestines, the distension occurs lower in the abdomen, may often be extreme, giving rise to cramps and pains, and is relieved only by passing considerable volumes of gas from the bowels. This is the condition that physicians speak of as intestinal flatulence. It is an excessively annoying condition and may sometimes give rise to twistings and consequent obstruction of the intestines, requiring a sugical operation for relief.

The gas in these cases originates from the decomposition of food in the intestines, which decomposition occurs as the result of two important factors.

The first of these factors is the presence in the intestines of certain organisms or germs that favor putrefaction changes in the food.

The second factor is the presence of food that favors the activity of the germ.

A third factor, which may or may not be present, is that of a weakened or a mechanically interfered-with bowel-wall that interferes with the prompt forward movement of the content of the intestine.

When you are afflicted with this condition you ought to consult your physician, who will probably give you something to destroy the excessive germ-life in the intestines.

You, of course, will co-operate by carrying out his directions, both as to medicine and diet. It is important to have his advice in the matter of diet, because the fermentation or putrefaction may occur in either your starches or sugars or in the meat or protein elements of your diet.

If it shall be determined that the fermentation occurs in your starches and sugars, your physician will probably tell you to avoid green vegetables, especially cabbage, radishes, beans, salads; most of the fruits, especially those carrying a high sugar content; oily or greasy foods; all alcoholic drinks and all excess of tea and coffee.

He will likewise probably tell you that you may have soft-boiled or poached eggs, white meat of chicken lean red meat, sweetbreads and fresh butter; also toast or stale bread, zwieback, preferably whole meal bread; spinach, celery and asparagus. The cooked cereals may be taken freely; also the more acidulous fruit juices.

If, however, it shall be determined that the putrefaction occurs chiefly in the meat element of your diet, and not in the starches and sugars, it will be necessary still further to restrict, not to exclude, the taking of meats during the period of recovery.

The medical side of the treatment consists in measures to arouse the natural secretions of the liver and intestines, these secretions being the best germ killers and should be taken only under the directions of your physician.

"I was washing our kitchen floor one day and my little 4-year-old cousin, who was visiting our house wanted to help. I said: 'No, you can't wash the floor because you don't put enough elbow grease on.' She answered: 'Oh, you can put that on for me.' "

FINANCE

—By B. C. FORBES—

Changed days.

Not long ago North and South Dakota were enthusiastically driving out big business. The State itself was going to make everybody rich and prosperous by launching all sorts of business enterprises.

The two Dakota cities of Huron and Fargo indulged in a public holiday the other day. There were decorations galore, bands, parades, speeches and a barbecue to which all were welcome. What was the occasion of this great rejoicing.

One of the much-maligned Chicago packers, Armour & Co., had agreed to return to the Dakotas and to open two meat-packing plants in the cities named.

The politicians' fine-sounding plans had collapsed disastrously, ruining many. The Fargo plant had been idle two and one-half years, after the politicians had sunk $1,000,000 operating it. The Huron plant had never even opened, although the public's money had been freely spent for costly machinery.

And so big business, viciously driven from the Dakotas, was welcomed back with demonstrations suggestive of a Roman holiday to welcome home a conquering hero.

Verily, changed days.

Tom Lamont, leading J. P. Morgan & Company partner, made a little talk the other evening at the opening of a most elaborate new hospital at Englewood, N. J., a large part of which was presented by friends as a memorial to the late Harry Davison, formerly Lamont's associate.

"I would like," remarked Mr. Lamont, smiling, "to make a touching reference to the perseverance and persistence of Marvin Coe, who, in raising funds for this hospital, has touched me as often as the French government has asked loans in this country."

The new president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, General Atterbury, in sending out the 173rd consecutive cash dividend, to 145,548 stockholders, invites co-operation in drumming up business for the road and says to those wanting more information about the road or wanting to offer criticisms or suggestions, "Please let me hear from you." Atterbury should prove an excellent manager.

HYANNIS AFTER MORE STEAMER SERVICE

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor.

Those who do not associate Chamber of Commerce activities and general up-to-date liveliness with old Cape Cod gather their ideas of it only from the historic past. Every month the Cape Cod Chamber of Commerce has its meetings, the most recent one being addressed by Congressman Charles L. Gifford and others. "Development of the South Hyannis Pier" and "Steamship Service Between Hyannis and New York" were the topics.

* * *

"I understand that during the Summer months Hyannis boasts its special trains every week, run direct from New York and frequently in two sections. Although Greater Bostonians, of course, appreciate Hyannis and the surrounding country, the writer has heard complaints even larger appreciation is shown by residents of Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York, who make up the crowds on the Summer 'specials' just mentioned.

* * *

First conference of its kind in New England history will be held in Portland, Me., in January, when more than 500 business men, representing every phase of industry in this section and Eastern New York, and including executives of every railroad east of the Mississippi meet to discuss transportation problems. Plans for the conference will be completed next week, when a definite date for the meeting will be announced.

* * *

Those to attend the parley comprise the newly-organized New England shippers' advisory board. The purposes of the conference are:

1. To analyze transportation needs in New England.
2. To study production, markets, distribution and trade channels of commodities handled in this territory.
3. To promote car and operating efficiency.
4. To secure a proper understanding by railroads of the transportation needs of the shippers.
5. To acquaint shippers and railroads in each section of the country with seasonal requirements in this section in order to promote intelligent co-operation in the handling of equipment between the different districts of the country.
6. To settle informally car supply and transportation difficulties.

* * *

Evening Post Bangor special says transaction has practically been closed whereby Col. Albert Pierce of Chicago will acquire interests of Arthur R. Gould and associates in hydro-electric developments in Aroostook county, including Aroostook Valley Railroad, several power plants and extensive light and power lines serving many Aroostook towns.

More Capital Stock

BROKERS' VIEWS OF BIG STOCK MARKET

Paul Johnson & Co.—The recent public statement of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon cannot be considered anything but bullish. The attitude of President Coolidge toward speedy railroad consolidations is also bullish. Rails, oils and steels look best.

Hayden, Stone & Co.—The stock market, after the sharp corrective movement in the more popular automobile and speculative shares, has apparently found a more or less settled level at which to await further developments, although the railroad and oil shares have shown pronounced strength.

Tucker, Anthony & Co.—The familiar cycle of a break, a rebound and then a secondary reaction having been completed, we now discern concerted upbidding in such legitimate stocks as rails, oils and steels.

Clark, Childs & Co.—We believe the stock market situation to be inherently sound and that a great many stocks are in a position to be bought for a substantial profit.

Elmer Bright & Co.—A successful culmination of the Nickel Plate consolidation plans, outcome of which may be expected about the first of the year, would furnish the speculative spark, which could easily lead to a market such as the railroad consolidation market of 1901.

Boston's Greatest Need

An Encircling Thoroughfare

Traffic congestion in the Capital City of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts has reached a point where it is not only an insult to the intelligence of those charged with the responsibility of government.

It is also an injury to the welfare of every citizen of Massachusetts dependent in any degree upon the service of Boston as a political capital, a business metropolis, a transportation centre, a centre of population, a gateway to the sea, and the home of the only airport on the New England coast.

For the relief of a condition of affairs that has grown from a local nuisance into a metropolitan disgrace that reflects upon the whole region, the Metropolitan Planning Board of the City of Boston has submitted a plan to the General Court for consideration at the coming session.

This plan calls for the construction of certain missing links in Boston's parkway and road system which will give an almost continuous circumferential highway from the North to the South, and will pass around the most thickly settled sections of the Metropolitan area.

After a careful study of traffic conditions throughout Greater Boston, the Planning Board unhesitatingly declares that the construction of these missing links is Greater Boston's "greatest present highway need."

The total length of the missing links to be constructed, according to this plan, is 12.6 miles, and the total length of the encircling route, which would result, would be 37 miles.

And this could be done at a total cost of only about $2,000,000.

If Governor Fuller will recommend to the Legislature, in his next annual message, the prompt adoption of the Metropolitan Planning Board's urgent recommendation, the Boston Evening American believes that Public Sentiment will compel the Legislature to authorize the project without delay.

Here is something close at hand that Government can do and that Government ought to do to promote the happiness of the people dependent upon Government for their protection.

Here is a task that all the citizens of Massachusetts, whether they live in their capital city or elsewhere in the Commonwealth, have a right to expect that their public servants on Beacon Hill will tackle with the will that always finds the way.

Here is truly the "greatest present highway need" of Greater Boston, and one of the simplest, cheapest, quickest ways to help Boston to discharge its manifold responsibilities as the Capital City of Massachusetts, the metropolis, and transportation and trading centre of New England, as New England's great gateway to the sea, and as the home of the only airport on the New England coast.

No Governor of Massachusetts has come to his high office better qualified by training and experience than is Governor Fuller to comprehend the benefits that will accrue to all the people by such an improvement in transportation as this North and South thoroughfare would provide.

It is reasonable, therefore, to hope and believe that the report of the Metropolitan Planning Board will receive his careful consideration, and that by reason of his study of its findings, the Governor will make the construction of this encircling thoroughfare one of his main recommendations for legislation at the next session of the General Court.

If Governor Fuller will do that, with whole heartedness and in defiance of the petty opposition of "pork-barrel" politicians, Public Sentiment here in Greater Boston and there and everywhere throughout Massachusetts, as this newspaper believes, will do the rest.

Chile and the League

Appeal Over General Pershing's Head Will Not Help Her

Chile's appeal to the League of Nations over General Pershing's head turns out not to be an appeal at all. It is nevertheless a gesture that will not help Chile.

The row over the border provinces of Tacna and Arica had been boiling for forty years when Chile and Peru asked President Coolidge to settle it by arbitration. The President decided to base his award on a popular vote of the disputed provinces. He sent General Pershing to run the election.

It was not as simple as it might seem. The whole proceeding was mixed with angry feeling. Only an outsider could have produced conditions approximating fairness.

Neither side has helped General Pershing in his task. Now that Chile appeals over his head, even in the most informal manner possible, to the League the problem will be further complicated.

But what can the League do about it? Nothing.

In the first place the United States and the vast bulk of Latin America would invoke the Monroe Doctrine just as effectually against European intervention by a league as by an individual nation.

In the second place the League's powers to enforce a decision, whether against Chile or Peru, are puny in comparison with the power of the United States.

What Sleep Means

It Recharges Your Nervous Batteries

The scientific committee that allowed a body of students to go sixty hours without sleep—a crime against the students, but perhaps that doesn't matter—reports that sleep has both LENGTH and DEPTH. One man in five hours of DEEP sleep may store up as much rest as another in ten hours.

The learned committee also suggests, about ten thousand miles wide of the mark, that sleep may be only "a form of intoxication, due to storing of poison in the system."

If we could get rid of our poisons as fast as we develop them, say the wise men, we might get along without sleep.

That is scientific BOSH. Sleep is to a human being what the time spent in recharging is to an electric battery. We use up our nervous and physical powers in waking hours, and make up the loss in sleep. The very young, in constant movement, need MUCH sleep.

The adult in his prime, less active, needs less sleep, but PLENTY. The old man in good health needs little. The VERY old man leads a life that is between sleeping and waking.

THE UNITED STATES HISTORIC TRADITION — FREEDOM FROM ALL FORMS OF FOREIGN ENTANGLEMENTS
WORLD COURT PROPAGANDA
U.S.
O.P. WILLIAMS

THE propagandists for the World Court have been busy as beavers.

And they have been as dangerous.

The beaver is often cited as a worthy model of industry. But the beaver destroys valuable standing timber. He obstructs the valuable flow of streams.

The advocates of the entry of the United States into the World Court would destroy the most valuable timber in all America. It is the flagpole to which is lashed the traditional policy of this country against foreign entanglements.

They would obstruct the most powerful stream in the world today. That is the independent and salutary action of the United States, unhampered by the political strings of any court or league.

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

A NEW YORK woman is suing the Bell System for ten thousand dollars because her Pomeranian got his tail caught in one of their automatic telephones.

SHE'S had him for three years and he's never telephoned anybody yet.

HE wouldn't 'phone even if he wanted to, because theirs was a pay station an' the dog didn't have a nickel.

SHE admitted, however, that she used to have a dog who always knocked the receiver off the hook and snapped at central.

HE growled so viciously that the chief operator thought it was her husband.

THE dog was really dangerous. He even had to wear a muzzle when he telephoned.

LISTEN, WORLD!

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Elsie Robinson

GEORGE BRANDES, the Norwegian critic, has written a treatise to prove that the story of Jesus is a myth. He claims that Jesus was but one of the great company of legendary heroic characters and that he has no place in actual history.

COME UNTO ME ALL YE THAT LABOR & ARE HEAVY LADEN—IS THE STORY OF JESUS A MYTH?
E.R.

"No more true, no more important than the other legends," reads the article annnouncing the publication of this work in America.

George Brandes is a famous critic, but his opinion of Jesus would hardly be important to us if it were not also the opinion of an increasing number of our own citizens.

Whether he lived or not, Jesus has, in effect, become a legendary character to countless thousands of people whom you and I meet daily. And to these thousands, George Brandes' articles will come as a confirmation of their own doubts.

They will say: "I knew it all along. Isn't it fierce the kinda bunk the churches have made people swallow. Read this here. Great stuff. Proves conclusively that there never was such a person as Jesus. Of course they found a lotta documents written about him, and they've put them in the Bible."

I shall not try to answer Mr. Brandes' contention nor reply to the remarks of those who agree with them. If I wish to believe that Jesus lived, that's MY business. If you wish to believe that he didn't live, that's YOUR business. And neither one of us has the right to try to shove his beliefs down the other fellow's throat.

Suppose Jesus didn't live—

MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By Helen Rowland

"THE sweet, old-fashioned vamp" is no more. She has passed into the discard, along with high-button shoes, woman's crown of glory, neglected wives, hatpins and corsets.

* * *

Once upon a time good little wives and happy sweethearts dwelt in the holy fear of vamps, love pirates and chorus girls. But that was away back in the dark ages of the hook-and-eye period.

Helen Rowland

* * *

The professional siren no longer holds all the cards in the love game. Every girl is a "vamp" in her own right and her own way these days, even if she is only a wife who concentrates on vamping her own husband with a boudoir cap and a waffle iron.

* * *

Three Minute Journeys

By TEMPLE MANNING

ANYBODY who walked into Bruges unsuspectingly, during the national holiday, would get a shock that would last for some time. For in the space of a second, he would be transferred back several centuries into the midst of the splendors and glories of the Middle Ages.

During this time, the museums of Bruges are completely ransacked for costumes and arms. The very clothes that were worn by knights of old again traverse the canals on barges, carpeted and decorated and flanked with bay trees.

There are Flemish wedding feasts, reproducing in every detail the feasts of the sixteenth century. The very flutists and violinists play the airs of the bygone century.

The spectacle ends in a series of patriotic floats and fireworks. There is a grand celebration, dancing and singing and general merrymaking.

There is no place in the world that would not lend itself to demonstration of this sort as well as Bruges does. The city itself, with its gabled roofs, fortresses, city gates, canals and tiny bridges, is medieval enough to lend the illusion of complete reality to the pageant that passes through it.

Belgium is noted for the remarkable industry of its inhabitants. The tiny farms are cultivated to the best degree.

The quaint old-world atmosphere seems incongruous when compared with the bustling activities of the present day, but they lend an air of charm and beauty that is hard to find in this day of hurry and bustle.

"You Said It, Marceline!"

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

On "RUFFLED PLUMES."

PRETTY WOMEN are Often PIQUED BY Something they CANNOT UNDERSTAND, such as
A MAN who shows
NO INTEREST in them, or
A PLAIN WOMAN who Receives FAR more
ATTENTION than THEY do.
When some women get
PEEVED at a man, THEY Turn round and
DEMAND his admiration,
But they DON'T GET IT,
For a WOMAN who is
PIQUED is never PIQUANTE.
She is MERELY PROVOKING.
But MEN it seems
ALSO get piqued. Generally
When they are CONFRONTED
By a difficult SITUATION
They cannot GRASP in
The FORM of
A PRETTY WOMAN or
In a girl who LOOKS
EASY and YET
ELUDES THEM. Still,
MEN SHOULD BEWARE, for
Pique is but wounded vanity
And RUFFLED PLUMES
ARE EASY PICKING.

TENT POLE MAY NEED PUSHING UP

By DR. FRANK CRANE

IF you feel oppressed by the crowding close of present things, the tent pole needs to be pushed up.

Longing is the tent pole which holds up the canvas of common, everyday hours.

When the world is too much with you, when all things seem the same size and you can't see big things big and little things little any more; when the commonness and drabness and grayness of the "now" presses close and seems to stifle—it means that the canvas is sagging low.

To push it back you need to dream of the thing you long for; your mind needs to dwell for a time in the hope-for future, to think of the ideal. Thus you push up the tent pole.

> "Of all the myriad moods of mind
> That through the soul come thronging,
> Which one was e'er so dear, so kind,
> So beautiful, as longing!
> The thing we long for, that we are
> For one transcendent moment,
> Before the present poor and bare
> Can make its sneering comment."

It is in these transcendent moments when we live and dream in the future that we escape the pressure of present things, that we push back the stifling canvas of the Littles.

The mind can leave the present and push out into the clean, wide open of the longed-for future and in its quiet find needed repose.

Afterwards the present poor and bare will make its sneering comment, but you have had a breathing spell and are refreshed.

Those who never live in the future are the ones who are smothered under the pressure of the present.

An ideal, a dream for the future, striven for, though never attained, is the tent pole that pushes away the canvas of the present and lets you breathe.

MYSTERIOUS RAYS FROM SPACE

By Garrett P. Serviss,
Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

PERHAPS the most extraordinary of the many recent discoveries in the physics of the earth and the universe is that announced by Dr. R. A. Millikan concerning the existence of mysterious rays of astonishing penetrative power which come in upon the earth equally by night and by day, from all directions, and which seem to originate from atomic transformations going on throughout surrounding space.

The energy involved in the formation of these strange rays is believed to be fifty times greater than that which produces the most intense radioactive transformations hitherto known.

These rays do not come from the sun; they are not visible; they are only detected by their electric action; they consist of waves probably ten million times shorter than those of light, and their frequency of vibration is so enormous that they are capable of passing through six feet of solid lead, while "the most penetrating rays that we produce in our hospitals cannot go through half an inch of lead."

From the Earth

They come upon the earth from all sides, "certainly not a whit more plentifully from the direction of the sun than from that diametrically opposite to it."

How do they affect us? We do not know—they have only just been discovered. Evidently, then, they have not been doing us any harm of which we are aware. The story of their discovery has the fascination of all sudden glimpses into the unknown and mysterious. As long as twenty years ago physicists became aware of what was called "penetrating radiation," which caused electricity to leak from charged electroscopes enclosed in metallic chambers. It was thought that this came from radio-active substances in the earth.

But a year or two before the war some German physicists found by balloon experiments that the "penetrating radiation" was more abundant at high altitudes than at the surface of the earth. The discovery languished during the war, but in 1922 Dr. Millikan sent up sounding-balloons in Texas carrying delicate recording instruments, one to a height of about ten miles. These experiments "proved conclusively" that the strange radiation was stronger aloft than below.

In 1923 the experiments were transferred to Pike's Peak, and there "soft" rays of local origin were encountered, which were twice as intense as near sea level at Pasadena. The problem then was to account for the increased abundance of the "soft" rays while trying to settle definitely the question of the existence of "a small, very penetrating radiation of cosmic origin."

The upshot was that the increase of the "soft" rays on the Peak was ascribed to a partial transformation of the mysterious cosmic days on striking the mountain, no other cause being apparent.

The method used to determine the penetrating power of the strange rays involved measurement of their absorption by water, and for this purpose it was necessary to have water uncontaminated by seepage through radio-active material in the surrounding ground and rocks.

The deep, smoke-fed Muir Lake at an elevation of 11,800 feet near the summit of Mt. Whitney, Cal., afforded the desired security, and in its clear cold water electroscopes were lowered to depths of as much as sixty feet.

They gave "unambiguous" evidence that the cosmic rays penetrated the water to a depth of forty-five feet. The absorptive power of the thickness of atmosphere above the lake was estimated as equal to that of twenty-three feet of water, making the whole penetration of the rays sixty-eight feet of water, equivalent to six feet of lead!

Great Engergy

As already said, Dr. Millikan's idea of the source or origin of the mysterious rays is that they arise from transformation of the nuclei of atoms out in space. The intensity of the energy concerned becomes almost appalling when it is reckoned to be fifty times as great as that of the most intense radio-active transformation known on the earth.

Dr. Millikan is said to have estimated than an energy of ten million volts would be needed to produce such rays in a laboratory.

This new field of speculation opened is almost limitless. It covers the fundamental problems of radio action, and perhaps the whole subject of birth, development and continued life of the universe.

WHEN THE MIDDLEAGED FLIRTS WITH YOUTH

You think, old man, that your wife is not jealous and that the attention you pay to other women and girls does not annoy her.

Possibly there are some young girls in the office, flattered by attention from you.

They accept luncheon invitations from you because those of their own age have not the money to spend as you do.

You are convinced that it is a harmless way to spend a part of your time and feel sure there is nothing about it to which your wife could object.

But she does object, just the same.

How different would it be if she were to accept invitations from young fellows, young enough to be her sons?

Yet you think it all right for you to associate with young girls, young enough to be your daughters.

Saying that "you feel like a Daddy to them" is an old and threadbare story.
